Fire destroys another dorm for employees at Fernwood

BUSHKILL — A two-alarm fire destroyed approximately 85 per cent of a 20-unit employees building at the Fernwood resort early Saturday morning.

The cause of the fire, which began at the western end of the building, is still under investigation, according to Bushkill Fire Chief Robert Rohner.

The 1:08 a.m. alarm brought out 28 men and two juniors with four trucks from the Bushkill fire company and 30 men with five trucks from Marshalls Creek. It took firefighters four and a half hours to get the blaze under control and out.

Rohner reported the firemen used 40,000 gallons of water to fight the fire. Some of this water was obtained from an indoor swimming pool and from a pond on the other side of Rte. 209.

Traffic was blocked on Rte. 209 until a truck from the East Stroudsburg fire company arrived with hose ramps. These ramps enabled traffic to proceed without damaging the hoses.

Rohner explained the maximum water-carrying capacity of the company's equipment is 2,500 gallons so when there are any major fires, another source of water must be found.

There were no injuries. The Bushkill Ambulance stood by as a routine precaution.

The building had been the home of 80 Fernwood employees. Rohner said they lived there four to a room and most of the rooms were occupied when the fire broke out.

Fernwood management refused to comment or answer questions Sunday night.

Some walls and charred beams were still standing Sunday as Fernwood employees sifted through the foot-deep black soot covering the floor.

Observers could see metal bedsprings and chair frames among the black cinders and soot.

Damages were heaviest at the western end of the long, rectangular building.

Rohner said last year a similar fire occurred in the adjacent building, also an employees dormitory. Rohner said that building was replaced by an 80 per cent fireproof structure.

Pair of jacks in hole wins pot for 'Sailor' Roberts

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — On the last deal of the "World Series of Poker" Saturday, Brian "Sailor" Roberts, flipped over his hole cards — both jacks — and cleaned up $210,000.

That ended the 45-hour marathon poker game at the Horseshoe Club. Roberts, Bob Hooks and "Dapper" Crandall Addington — all Texans — were the survivors of a field of 21 gamblers who had put up $10,000 each for the right to sit in on the winner-take-all game of "hold 'em" last Tuesday night.

"Hold 'em" is a form of seven-card stud that is very popular in Texas.

The final round began Saturday at 4:00 p.m. in the smoke-filled casino. Addington tossed in the towel at 6:20 p.m. On the last deal of the game, Roberts had jacks in the hole, and Hooks had a jack and a nine of clubs in the hole.

By BOBBY WESTBROOK
STROUDSBURG — Early historians are very reticent about John Stroud, yet the public is better acquainted with the farmhouse he lived in and the acres he farmed, now Glen Brook Country Club, than with any of the homes Jacob Stroud built for his children, except possibly the Stroud Mansion House in Stroudsburg.

Stroud Mansion was built originally for John, the oldest son of Jacob and Elizabeth McDowell Stroud, whose father expected him to follow in his footsteps in his many business interests. "John," the old history books report, "preferred the life of a farmer" so that Jacob called home his second son, Daniel, from a lucrative law practice in Easton, and built what is now Glen Brook west of the tiny town for John.

Other relevant data about John includes the information that he was born July 12, 1768 at 1 a.m., the third of 11 children, "on a plantation his father had purchased of James Hillman, now known as the Anderson place, in Smithfield."

Also recorded is the fact that on Jan. 8, 1793, John married his second cousin, Elizabeth DePui, daughter of Nicholas and Eleanor, in the stone mansion at Shawnee. That's where Elizabeth had been born on June 1, 1776. Elizabeth was 17 and John was 25 and still, apparently, the apple of his father's eye at the time of their marriage.

Black sheep

After that things seem to have deteriorated. They moved into and out of the Mansion House, they had children, and died young. The history books offer no explanation but the rueful family tradition handed down to descendants still living in Monroe County has it that John was the black sheep of the family, and an alcoholic.

But he must also have been a colorful and dramatic figure. Juanita Vail Kushner, who is descended from both the sober Daniel and perhaps not so sober John, has had John described as riding a big black stallion. One time, tradition has it, he rode the stallion right up on the porch of a hotel and into the tavern to order drinks for both his horse and himself.

She also recalls among the family stories handed down that his children, having suffered the family problems created by alcohol, became devoted tee-totalers, passing on their convictions to their children and their children's children.

That something was definitely wrong is supported by the terms of Jacob Stroud's will, recorded in the Northampton County Courthouse in Easton of which Monroe County was then still a part. Although the will records in great detail his bequests to all his other children, John comes out very much on the short end of the stick.

In the will, recorded after his death in 1806, Jacob Stroud adds a somewhat strange bequest to others which he left to "My well-beloved wife, Elizabeth Stroud."

These bequests already had included such details as "my black mare and two cows, two feather beds and bedding complete therefor, and furniture sufficient for furnishing one room, as well as sufficient kitchen furniture as she shall choose, and also free use of the frame house and lot along the lane down to my garden during the term of her natural life, and free use of all my orchards" as well as the sum of 200 dollars or 75 pounds per annum.

Koh Tang battle toll higher than first report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The toll suffered by U.S. forces last week in the battle of Koh Tang Island was much heavier than initially reported and the possibility exists that some Marines were left behind, Pentagon officials said Sunday.

Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger disclosed the new casualty figures — five killed, 70 to 80 wounded and 16 missing in action — and said even that listing might not reflect the final total. Other sources said the toll could go even higher.

Schlesinger and other officials said many of the wounded were only slightly injured. But the new figures amounted to a casualty rate of about 50 per cent of the 200 men who stormed Koh Tang during the 14-hour fight launched to rescue the crew of the merchant ship Mayaguez.

The previous Pentagon report of casualties showed one dead, 22 wounded and 13 missing in action. Other defense officials, meanwhile, said they could not rule out the possibility some men might have been left behind Thursday in the night time helicopter evacuation of the company-size Marine assault force.

There is no specific report of any man left behind, officials said, but it is "not an excluded possibility" because great confusion still exists over exactly who was rescued.

"That's our most fearsome and awesome possibility," said one source. "We've got to get every one of those names checked off."

Two U.S. Navy destroyers were believed still assigned to the sea area around Koh Tang, a speck of land three miles long by one mile wide which lies about 30 miles southwest of the Cambodian port of Kompong Som.

Sources said the problem with accounting for the missing resulted from the way the Marines were dispersed rapidly after the military action ended.

They said some men were on the destroyers Holt and Wilson in the Gulf of Thailand, some were at U Tapao air base in Thailand, some were on the aircraft carrier Coral Sea, some were flown to Okinawa and still others were believed to be at Clark Air Base in the Philippines.

"This confusion is driving everybody around the bend," one source said.

The presumption that some men might have been left behind alive on the island probably can not be ruled out until an accurate tally is made of all those rescued and interviews with the survivors identify those who might have been killed but not recovered.

Various sources said it would take anywhere from a few days to a week to straighten out the confusion.

One Marine source said many of the wounded were "in the Bandaid category."

'Gap' won't serve as refugee center

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Reports that as many as 25,000 Vietnamese refugees might be transferred to nearby Ft. Indiantown Gap for processing are false, according to an aide to Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa.

Pat Agnew, Scott's press secretary, said Saturday night that Caspar Weinberger, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, sent Scott a courtesy letter last week indicating the fort had been rejected as a possible fourth processing center because it could only accommodate 4,000 refugees.

The fort is a military reservation used primarily for weekend National Guard training.

According to Ms. Agnew, Scott learned Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp had offered to use Ft. Indiantown Gap to the federal government about two weeks ago for housing of 1,000 refugees. Scott, she said, offered to assist in the project.

She said the federal government was looking for a facility to accommodate 20,000 refugees, who must be screened and identified before they are released to sponsoring families in American communities.

But according to Eleanor Green, a spokeswoman for the task force resettling the refugees, no decision has been made on where — or even whether — to open a fourth refugee camp.

Thais burn Uncle Sam effigy

BANGKOK (UPI) — Thai demonstrators burned an effigy of Uncle Sam outside the U.S. embassy Sunday in the second day of a vigil protesting the use of Thai-based American Marines to recapture an American freighter Mayaguez and its crew from Cambodian Communists.

About 2,000 protestors took part in the demonstration. Leaders won a pledge from Foreign Minister Chatchai Choonhavan to speed up the recall of the Thai ambassador in Washington if a formal written apology from the Ford administration is not received by 6 p.m. Tuesday (7 a.m. EDT).

some 30 miles from the mainland.

Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger said Sunday new figures showed five Marines were killed, 16 were missing and 70 to 80 were wounded in the battle on Tang island. He said the tally was not final.

Miller, in a dramatic dockside news conference, said Saturday the crew would not have been freed if it had not been for American military action.

He said he told the Cambodians he was not carrying military cargo and promised he would stop the air attacks if they would free the crew and the ship. He said all the crew were gassed and three suffered shrapnel wounds from U.S. planes attempting to stop the transfer of the crew to the Cambodian mainland.

"I don't blame the pilots, they were only trying to keep us out of Kompong Som," the mainland port the Cambodians call Sihanoukville, Miller said. "They wanted us returned to the vessel (Mayaguez)."

Crewmembers were cheerful when they talked to newsmen Saturday and most said they were not bitter about the incident.

Jacob Stroud built Glen Brook

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a weekly series by Bobby Westbrook on some of the historic places in this area, the people who built them and how the years have changed them in a countdown through 1975 toward the Bicentennial year of 1776.)

By BOBBY WESTBROOK
STROUDSBURG — Early historians are very reticent about John Stroud, yet the public is better acquainted with the farmhouse he lived in and the acres he farmed, now Glen Brook Country Club, than with any of the homes Jacob Stroud built for his children, except possibly the Stroud Mansion House in Stroudsburg.

Given balance of all his debts

To Elizabeth and his friend, Nicholas DePui, he left the land conveyed to him by the heirs of her father and John McDowell, but then comes the clincher: He also left them two tracts of land, one of 192½ acres, called the Kiser Place, and another tract of 170 acres, granted by patent in 1782.

"In trust for my son, John Stroud, for the maintenance of my said son's children, during the natural life of my son, John, and at his decease to be divided between John Peter

Stroud, the reputed son of my said son, John Stroud, and his other children, share and share alike, except Jacob, the son of my son, John, who shall have a double share or as much as two others.

As for John, himself, his father added: "I bequeath and give to John the balance of all debts which he owes me."

Why Jacob should get a double share may have been merely due to an old man's vanity in having a grandson named after him.

What of this "reputed" son,

John Peter Stroud? The Stroud genealogy in the Monroe County historical society includes his name but in a somewhat different pattern where the parents' marriage is followed by the list of the children but discreetly separated from that under the heading "Children of John Stroud" with no clues as to John Peter's maternal heritage.

The statistics include only the information that he was born in 1793, the year of his father's marriage, and that he died in 1829 at the age of 36 in Bushkill.

Today's sociologists would probably be much more sympathetic with John Stroud, called upon to face responsibilities to which he was not equal. Even in colonial times, and even if you were a Stroud it didn't necessarily mean that children always fit into the pattern which their parents had envisioned for them.

On the credit side of the ledger is the evidence that Daniel thought enough of his older brother, even after he had been called home to take his place to appoint him to the committee to set up the first school in what is now Monroe County on Kaber's Hill where John is now buried.

Add to that, the record of John's children, their marriages to prominent local families and the accomplishments of their descendants.

From the ecologists' point of view there is also the fact that, alone among the Stroud houses now standing, John's farm home is still situated among its surrounding acres so that today's citizens can still trace the contours of the land he once farmed.

Moreover, happier days were ahead for his homestead under the care of a son-in-law John didn't live to meet: Joseph Kerr, an Orangeman who immigrated from Ireland, and who married John and Elizabeth's oldest daughter, Eleanor, and who contributed much to his adopted county.

What he contributed and how what was known for almost 100 years as the Kerr Farm became a country club will be the subject of the next in the series on historical homes.

What's news

IBM goes on trial today

NEW YORK — The International Business Machine Corp., at the end of six years of preparation and legal hassles, goes on trial today in a Justice Department suit charging it with violating antitrust law. The non-jury trial in Manhattan Federal Court is expected to take up most of two years to complete. A decision on whether IBM, the nation's ninth-largest company, monopolized the multi-billion dollar computer market could require several months. The government, contending that IBM controls about 70 per cent of the market in general purpose digital computers, seeks to break up IBM into an unspecified number of competing companies.

Cleaver wants to come home

NEW YORK — Expatriate Eldridge Cleaver, a one-time leader of the militant black movement in the United States, said Sunday he would like to come home "no later than the 4th of July, on the 200th anniversary of our country." Cleaver, now living in exile in Paris with his wife, said on the program "60 Minutes," CBS-TV, that "we can solve our problems without fighting a war of liberation, simply because the system itself has reacted to the pressure that was brought upon it." In 1970, Cleaver jumped bail in connection with a shootout in Oakland, Calif., and fled to Cuba and then to Algeria and ultimately to Paris. Now, he says he is ready to stand trial for the Oakland incident but believes "I have a right to come back without going to trial. And I'm going to do everything I can to be able to do it."

U.S. holds Polish ship

SAN FRANCISCO — The rusting and dingy Polish trawler Kalmar Sunday was docked under armed guard, awaiting charges by the United States government that she fished two miles inside American waters. The Kalmar's 79 crewmen, most of them bearded, were confined to the 278-foot ship, moored within hearing distance of San Francisco's tourist-oriented Fisherman's Wharf. U.S. Attorney James Browning said the government will file a civil forfeiture petition and misdemeanor complaint today alleging that the trawler, part of a fleet of at least 70 Communist fishing vessels plying off the West Coast, was hauling in hake 10 miles from the coastline. The charges carry a maximum $100,000 fine and the possibility that the government may take and sell the ship and its cargo. The U.S. considers its territorial boundary to be three miles offshore, but under international law it protects a 'contiguous fishing zone' reaching 12 miles out.

'Super K' off again

VIENNA — Henry Kissinger arrived Sunday night, laying plans for talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko to rein his reputation as a super Secretary of State. Kissinger arrived to try to arrange a new nuclear arms limitation treaty to be signed in the fall by President Ford and General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev of the Soviet Communist party. The trip was designed in part to reassure Western allies of U.S. resolve and to lay the groundwork for Ford's own European trip later this month. During that trip, Ford will discuss the Middle East in a meeting with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Dorm damage contagious

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. — Year-end vandalism has become a tradition at West Virginia University. But damage during final examination week this year was nearly as spectacular as that recorded in 1919, when students celebrating a football victory burned down the school's observatory. And school officials are determined to end such shenanigans. Sinks and toilets were ripped from the walls and thrown into the streets. Dozens of windows were smashed, furniture burned, locks broken. The price tag for damage to WVU dormitories this year was a record $50,000, and students responsible for the damage are likely to pay in one way or another. A special investigative team has been established to identify students responsible for damage. "Appropriate legal action will be taken," WVU relations director Harry Ernst said.

'M-A-S-H', 'QB VII' vie for most Emmys

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The comedy series "M-A-S-H" and "QB VII," the dramatization of Leon Uris' novel, will compete for the lion's share of Emmys tonight at the 27th annual television academy awards.

The two-hour show (9 p.m. EDT) will feature all but a handful of the nominated stars, according to director Paul Keyes who signed nine of television's leading ladies to act as hostesses.

"QB VII," the 6½-hour drama which was shown in two installments, won 13 nominations. "M-A-S-H," the anti-war situation comedy set in a Korea War army hospital, was nominated for 11 Emmys.

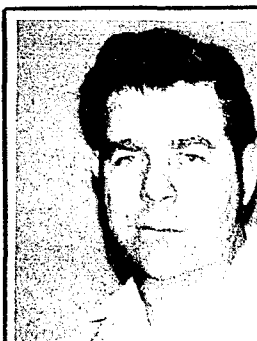

Other leading weekly series were "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," nine; "Cher," and "Streets of San Francisco," each with seven; "Kojak," six; and "The Carol Burnett Show," five.

Multiple nominations went to dramatic specials: "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom," nine; "The Missiles of October," eight; and "Benjamin Franklin," six.

Emmy statuettes will be awarded in 63 categories as voted by blue ribbon committees selected by television academy directors.

Appearing as hostesses for the awards show from the Hollywood Palladium will be former Emmy winners Lucille Ball, Carol Burnett, Michael Learned, Mary Tyler Moore, Jean Stapleton, Susan St. James and Karen Valentine.

Portuguese hold anti-U.S. rally

LISBON (UPI) — Demonstrators shouting anti-American slogans Sunday painted a red swastika on the U.S. embassy wall and demanded the arrest of two moderate army officers on the eve of a controversial meeting of Portugal's military rulers.

About 150 left-wing youths marched on the U.S. embassy, calling for the arrest and expulsion of ambassador Frank Carlucci and an unnamed Central Intelligence Agency agent.

The demonstrators, organized by an outlawed Maoist group, plastered the embassy walls with posters and red paint. One teen-ager crawled onto the shoulders of another to daub a red swastika across the U.S. emblem above the main entrance.

The demonstration erupted as the top 240 members of the Armed Forces Movement began arriving in Lisbon to discuss the creation of a Cuban-styled people's movement and a revolutionary tribunal to try political cases.

The official agenda for the Armed Forces Movement assembly described the proposed mass movement as an "alliance between the military and the people."

The agenda also said a plan would be submitted for the formation of a tribunal to deal with soldiers and civilians implicated in the attempted coup last March.

Embassy security chief Wayne Coombs and an unidentified Portuguese had to be given military protection when they were caught in the crowd outside the embassy.

Police at the scene did not intervene and it was not until troops arrived that the protesters marched away.

SPCA urges probe into tests on beagles

EDGEWOOD, Md. (UPI) — Leaders of the Baltimore Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals are calling for an investigation by Maryland congressmen into the Army's decision to resume testing on beagle puppies at its Edgewood Arsenal.

"We're not going to drop this," SPCA executive secretary Mary Downey Wilkes said in announcing the request for the probe by the state's congressmen.

The Army announced last Friday that it was resuming the use of the dogs in tests at the Edgewood Arsenal, but a spokesman stressed the experiments would not involve chemical or biological warfare research.

An official of the U.S. Army Materiel Command in Alexandria, Va., said the Defense Department undertook an "intensive review of beagle procurement" following the public outcry last year over the proposed purchase of beagles for experiments.

That outcry resulted in Congress attaching an amendment to the military appropriations bill last August prohibiting the use of Pentagon funds to purchase animals for chemical-biological warfare tests.

'Arrested' U.S. officials reportedly safe in Laos

VIENTIANE (UPI) — Three U.S. officials held under loose house arrest in a central Laotian town are safe, despite the failure of a cabinet-level delegation to fly to the town to arrange their release, high-ranking American sources said Sunday.

The sources denied reports from some quarters last week that the Americans in Savannakhet, about 180 miles southeast of Vientiane, had sent a message to the American embassy asking for a delegation to be sent to save them.

"No one has asked to leave," the sources said. "They plan to stay down there as long as they can."

The coalition government dominated by Pathet Lao Communists, meanwhile, said in a broadcast that demonstrations in recent weeks against "right-wing, anti-peace people" were justified.

The communists also said that the Americans who recently fled the country had taken government property with them and that Laotian embassies abroad had been instructed to give the exiled rightists no assistance.

Doctors won't end strike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Striking doctors in effect told Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., "no dice" to ending their 18-day walkout over increased malpractice insurance rates unless today's special legislative session produces immediate price reductions.

Brown called the special session to deal with the insurance crisis. But the possibility of an immediate solution appeared unlikely, said Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, who predicted legislative action would take at least 90 days.

More than 100 hospitals were expected to be affected by the walkout today. What started as a Northern California boycott, primarily by anesthesiologists who refuse to handle any but emergency cases, was extending to Southern California.

A slowdown was announced for 29 hospitals in Los Angeles and Orange counties. Seventy-seven hospitals in nine northern California hospitals already have been affected. Some prestigious San Francisco hospitals, previously borderline financial cases because of their public services, faced bankruptcy because of the decline in patient income.

The Los Angeles Society of Anesthesiologists, which has 300 members — about 25 per cent of those in California — said it would "not act in unison" but encouraged doctors "to act individually."

Anti-busing group holds 'convention' in Boston

BOSTON (UPI) — Some 2,000 cars with anti-busing flags and posters staged a peaceful motorcade to a rally in Boston Sunday, wrapping up the first national anti-busing convention.

The crowd estimated at upwards of 6,000 chanted, "Here we go Boston, here we go," a local anti-busing theme song. Some waved the red, white and green flag of ROAR, the organization sponsoring the rally to "Restore Our Alienated Rights."

Conservative New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim Thomson, who has said he may challenge President Ford in the New Hampshire primary, was expected to keynote the ROAR conclave. He did not appear, arriving late after attending the election of New Hampshire's GOP party chairman in Concord, N.H.

City Councillor Louise Day Hicks, national committee director of ROAR, told the rally, "I say the people of Boston and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts will never again" put up with "interference with our children."

Black radio broadcaster Clay Smothers, introduced as "leading the (anti-busing) struggle in Texas," told the rally he headed a black institution for disadvantaged children in Texas.

"Until we as black people in Boston, New York, Dallas and Houston can develop our own institutions as a base of strength, we will never accomplish that acceptance...we are seeking," he said.

The gathering followed a Saturday march by between 12,000 to 15,000 pro-integration demonstrators through the streets of Boston, where court ordered integration has sparked heated controversy.

The Saturday marchers were commemorating the 21st anniversary of the historic U.S. Supreme Court decision that ruled segregated schools were unconstitutional. They listened to speakers urge strong support of U.S. District Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr.'s order mandating the busing of 21,000 students next fall when a citywide desegregation plan goes into effect.

Weeds grow around 100 year-old grave markers in Jackson cemetery.

Jackson to repair old graveyard

West End Bureau
NEOLA — There are two cemeteries in Neola with the same name, have Civil War veterans buried in them and are a mile and a half apart. One St. John's Cemetery is in Jackson Township, the other in Hamilton Township. Jackson Township supervisors have agreed to spend up to $200 to fix up the abandoned St. John's, Jackson Township, cemetery.

Located on .27 of an acre across the road from Custom Concrete plant, the Jackson Township cemetery was begun many years ago by the Neola Methodist Church, according to Mr. Paul Miller, an 80-year-old resident whose grandfather once owned the farm where the abandoned cemetery is. The first marked grave indicated the cemetery was established as early as 1837, when the stone Neola Methodist Church was alongside it. Eventually the church's congregation outgrew the building and a new church was built. Most residents claim the original stone Methodist church burned down. According to a history of the original church, and adjoining cemetery, that was prepared in the 1950s by William Lesh, the Jackson Township's St.

John's contains 150 unmarked graves and 65 marked graves. Mrs. Miller said she only remembered 12 people ever being buried in the cemetery during her early childhood, but she said she did remember wooden posts in front of the graveyard, where horses could be tied during funerals. After the new, larger Methodist church was erected in Neola, according to Mrs. Miller, local residents were buried in the other St. John's cemetery on the Hamilton Township-Jackson Township line, in Stroudsburg or in the Kellersville cemetery. Mrs. Miller said the abandoned cemetery was originally incorporated and an official deed for the property was obtained in 1938 by Mrs. Rachel Hoffner, who was then in charge of the property. When she died, however, the cemetery was left uncared for. The last person to be buried in the tiny cemetery, which is now overgrown, was Roger VanBuskirk. When the grave was dug, the original wall of the stone church was unearthed. From the wall's location, it has been determined that the former church stood in part of the road that now runs by the cemetery. The St. John's Cemetery in Neola that lies in Hamilton Township, was begun by the St. John's Evangelical Church, known also as "The Rock's Church" and is still maintained today, according to Mrs. Miller.

done cemetery was originally incorporated and an official deed for the property was obtained in 1938 by Mrs. Rachel Hoffner, who was then in charge of the property. When she died, however, the cemetery was left uncared for. The last person to be buried in the tiny cemetery, which is now overgrown, was Roger VanBuskirk. When the grave was dug, the original wall of the stone church was unearthed. From the wall's location, it has been determined that the former church stood in part of the road that now runs by the cemetery. The St. John's Cemetery in Neola that lies in Hamilton Township, was begun by the St. John's Evangelical Church, known also as "The Rock's Church" and is still maintained today, according to Mrs. Miller.

Pike back pay approved

Pike County Bureau
MILFORD — Pike County Commissioners have approved retroactive salaries amounting to over $500 for five workers in the county Child Welfare Office. The salaries are for the period from January 1 to March 1, 1975, when the agency increased its office hours from 32 and a half hours a week to 37 hours a week. Commissioners approved the additional hours to conform with state mandated regulations. Child Welfare employees will receive the following retroactive pay: John Czar, $75.78; Judith Staffieri, $32.75; Helen Drabic, $150; Ruth Fick, $140 and Carol Helms, $135. Pike Commissioners were also informed by the state Department of Public Welfare that the county's child welfare budget for 1975 and annual plan has been approved. Czar, executive director, submitted a $91,876 revised budget in April that was approved by the commissioners. In other business, commissioners accepted a letter from the Health and Hospital Planning Council of Northeastern Pennsylvania (HHPC), asking them to encourage state legislation that would require fluoridation of public water supplies. HHPC adopted a resolution at its January meeting that stated fluoridation is an accepted preventive health measure which "reduces tooth decay and the cost of restorative dental care." The resolution stated fluoridation is supported by dental societies and has "been used successfully in many states and in parts of Pennsylvania for years." Commissioners took no direct action to support the HHPC resolution. Commissioners also took the following actions: — Approved the appointment of Stanley S. Goehring of Huntingdon R.D. 3 as the program director of the Tri-County Drug and Alcohol program. Goehring is presently an instructor and training supervisor at Pennsylvania State University. — Appointed Betty W. Smith and Doris Nelson as election clerks to the county's official election board. — Received a county financial report from county auditors for 1974. All offices were reported in order with no exceptions filed. — And approved a $23,830.61 bid from the Keystone Pavement and Construction Co., Lake Ariel for work on the Milford-Owego Turnpike. Work will include paving, regrading, and reshaping .8 miles of road from Milford to Dingman Township.

West End wanderings

BRODHEADSVILLE — The Western Pocono Jaycees have been named the 11th best chapter in the state of Pennsylvania — as a result of its activities during the past year. The honor was confirmed on the local club at the group's state convention. More than 20 West Enders attended the convention and were present when the chapter received its second consecutive Gold Chip Award. Other awards in the statewide competition of chapters were as follows: Bill Morris for the Jaycees Christmas party, second; Larry Johnson for the Little League doughnuts in the economic development category, first; Bob Coleman for community acting program, second; Duane Hubbard for membership recruitment, third; Lex Mills for wives' recognition, second, and Bob Coleman for overall programming for the chapter, third. Chaplain Ray Starnier also received a special spiritual award under the Faith in God category.

The official awards will be presented and installation of officers will be held at the group's annual installation banquet to be held at 6:30 p.m., May 31 at the Polk Township Firehouse.

Warren Mervine, Jr. has been appointed as the certified sewage enforcement officer for Hamilton Township. The permit fee will be $65, with $50 going to Mervine when the initial inspection is made and $15 going to him when the inspection is completed.

The Rev. Charles Ruloff, the new pastor at St. John's Lutheran Church in Effort, will hold a special communion and confirmation service at 10 a.m., Sunday, May 25 to receive Lisa Shupp, David Scheller and Timothy Hannon into the church following confirmation. Other new members to be received include Mrs. Normal Gould, Mr. and Mrs.

John Sniffin, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Grenz, and Mr. and Mrs. Hans Krause and family. Following the special services, the church will hold a welcoming dinner and reception in honor of the new members and the new pastor, who came to the church officially on April 1.

The Navy will not be performing at the West End Fair this year unless it is under attack from a foreign country. Efforts to have them put on a show after the Army presentation fell through, have failed. But have no fear, Sparky the Clown will be available for the full six days of the fair this year and tractor pulls will be running over two days. Tentatively, the garden tractor pull is scheduled for Saturday afternoon with local competition coming head to lead on Saturday night. On Sunday, the fair association will sponsor a Class A, sanctioned tractor pull, which is expected to draw competition from all over the state.

The Old Mill Restoration Committee in Hamilton Township has set May 31 as clean-up day at the Snyder'sville grist mill. If you have a strong back, report for duty at 1:30 p.m. Also, if you have any old books, think about donating them to the mill for the historic library the committee intends to maintain on the premises. The latest word on the restoration is that plans have been drawn up and funding appeals made to the S.S. Kresge Foundation have been rejected. The committee is now looking into other funding that may be available. If you can help, call Gloria Bonser, the new permanent chairman of the mill committee.

Water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink. That's exactly the situation the Chestnuthill Township supervisors are concerned about in the far distant future, if they cannot secure an agreement with the McMichael's fish association to have the first chance to tie up the headwaters of the McMichael's Creek, if the property ever goes up for sale. The supervisors fear that the Bethlehem Water Company might want to scoop up more West End water rights if it ever has the opportunity. Nothing has been decided on the question yet.

The great tug of war between Zion United Church Lutheran and the Hamilton Square Church is set for July 26, so mark the date of the annual picnic on your calendar. It's something you won't want to miss.

The Monroe County Extension Service will be sponsoring a special workshop at 7 p.m. May 20 at the Tannersville school to show 4-Hers how to put on demonstrations. Topics will include introduction, summary, timing, resources, organization, visual aids, eye contact, suitable topics and judging. The workshop is being held in preparation for the County Demonstration Contest set for June 28 at the Brainerd Presbyterian Center in Snyder'sville.

The Polk Township supervisors sport the biggest ash tray in town — it's three feet deep and more than one foot wide. Actually, it isn't an ashtray; it's the garbage can in the library that residents have become accustomed to huddling around to drop their ashes and butts in at township meetings. Doesn't anybody have any used tuna fish cans the supervisors can borrow for their meetings? Or better yet, maybe the board will follow the example of the Hamilton Township supervisors and post no-smoking signs in the Polk library.

The Chestnuthill Township supervisors are looking into the possibility of establishing a pension plan for its road workers. The decision is only tentative so far, but it's expected to come up formally in the next two months.

Industry going ahead on garbage-fueled energy

By DONALD R. LARRABEE
Ottaway News Service
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — While Congress and the White House haggle over energy policy, private industry is moving ahead with plans in two eastern states which could help every large metropolitan area in the country meet its own energy problems. All it takes is a lot of garbage.

Although garbage has been used as a fuel in Canada, Europe and Japan for many years, its potential is still relatively untapped in the United States. The experts say there is enough energy in the nation's garbage to light every home in America. One ton can produce the energy value of more than a barrel of fuel oil.

One company, Wheelabrator-Frye Inc., is embarking on major tests of the concept in Massachusetts and New Jersey, by teaming with Von Roll Ltd. of Switzerland which is the acknowledged world leader in the technology of converting refuse to energy. Von Roll has plants operating in 78 cities in Europe, Canada and Japan, with 35 more facilities under construction.

Wheelabrator-Frye is completing work on the largest energy extraction plant ever built without government money — and replacing an undesirable landfill at Saugus, Mass. in the process. Starting this fall, the plant will take the garbage of half a million people and convert it into steam for generating electricity in the General Electric Lynn River Works plant across the Saugus River.

The same company will soon announce plans to join with Jersey Central Power and Light in constructing the first electric generating station in the United States using only refuse as fuel. The Middlesex County plant will generate nearly one billion kilowatt hours of electricity per year, reputedly enough to light the homes of more than one million persons. In one year, it will dispose of about one-fifth million tons of garbage.

The $36 million facility at Saugus will get rid of 1,200 tons of refuse daily and save an estimated 73,000 gallons of oil. Refuse will be trucked in from the 16-18 Boston north shore communities whose trash has been dumped in the eye-sore landfill.

What is about to happen in the Bay State and, next year in New Jersey, could become models for scores of resource recovery operations throughout the country. What community doesn't have a garbage or landfill problem, or both? What city can't use an alternative energy source? And one the environmentalists will accept?

Wheelabrator-Frye isn't in the business alone although it claims to have the most thoroughly-proven system. Other firms are developing plants to extract energy and materials from refuse which reaches the staggering total of more than 130 million tons a year in this country.

The man who heads Wheelabrator's energy systems division, W. Clayton Stephens, concedes that such a successful plant needs population density, although he says their facilities can be scaled down to take care of an area of 100,000. The trash-to-energy concept seems ideal for a large, self-sufficient plant and might not work at all for those having only cyclic heating and cooling loads.

Industries such as paper, chemical processing, rubber, automotive and most heavy manufacturing and refinery plants apparently could benefit. Another ideal place, officials say, would be an industrial park where several light manufacturing plants could tie into the energy recovery system.

Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis is so excited by what is happening at Saugus, he is exploring the prospects for eight or 10 similar plants to be built privately in his state. The point to keep in mind, says Stephens, is that refuse is a plentiful supply of fuel that is generated most in the areas where fuel demand is highest.

One of the intriguing byproducts of the process is a sterile ash which is quenched in recycled water and then sold as road fill. The New Jersey plant has been designed to recover 230 tons of metals for recycling each day.

From the federal government's standpoint, the use of refuse as a fuel can contribute increasingly to a reduced dependence on foreign oil. The municipal waste generated every year in this country equates in energy value to 292 million barrels of low-sulphur fuel oil. That's about six per cent of United States production and about 99 per cent of all the oil we got from the Middle East last year.

Have graduates been misled?

The past weekend was highlighted by graduation ceremonies at many colleges in the area and throughout the nation.

A few years ago, new graduates were told they faced a world of challenge and unlimited opportunity. This year, commencement speakers stayed conspicuously away from such sentiments, for what in truth faces the 1975 crop of college graduates is a tight job market, and worse, a world that needs far fewer college-trained people than it has on hand.

In the '70s, we are reaping the harvest of the educational panic of the early '60s, when Sputnik and the space race persuaded us that we needed an educational factory capable of turning out highly trained men and women by the thousands in order to keep ahead of the Russians.

We are also seeing the results of academic narrow-mindedness that has been preaching the doctrine of more-education-for-better-jobs, despite growing evidence that more and more college graduates are seeking to fulfill that dogma while the number of jobs requiring higher education haven't grown to meet the demand.

The result is becoming all too commonplace: people with college degrees or two-year college certificates holding jobs filled just a few years ago by people with high school diplomas — and filled adequately, too.

So today's college graduates face not challenge and opportunity so much as frustration and alienation. At the heart of the oft-mentioned "job revolt", the eroding of the work ethic, is a number of intelligent, well-educated people stuck in jobs for which they are over trained.

The solution? Alter the structure of our industrial system to provide for more on-job challenge (in effect, reduce the decision-making functions of supervisors, making of them more personnel directors than job directors) or change the thrust of our arguments for students to stay in school: Education helps a person grow as a person, rather than "it helps you get a better job."

Unfortunately, academicians depend on a continuing influx of students to keep their jobs, income, prestige and power. They will not willingly erode their power base by telling the truth to prospective college men and women: "Sorry, but there's not much likelihood that your education will provide a better job; but it will help you become a more satisfied, well-adjusted, complete person."

That argument won't get you more students (read that "customers"). But it will help produce a generation of people under no illusions about what the work-a-day world has to offer and, in the long run, a more stable working society.

And maybe even one that is more satisfied, happier, more well-adjusted and less bedeviled by higher expectations and frustrations that accompanies not fulfilling them.

To all teachers

The third grade teacher was busy with her young charges. She had just pinned all the notes on their jackets, put on their overshoes and snowmobile boots and put them on the bus. She sat down at her desk to rest and to look at her paycheck.

One of the kids waiting for her mother to pick her up walked over to the teacher and said, "What's that?" "That's my paycheck," she answered. "Paycheck!" the girl said. "Where do you work?"

WILL THERE BE A DUMP-ROCKEFELLER CONTEST IN 1976? Some of President Ford's most influential political friends say there should be — and hope there will be. They favor an open contest for the vice-presidential nomination at the convention. The reasons:

It would be better for the party to have a free choice instead of having the nominee dictate his running mate.

It would reduce much of the political heat directed at the President by conservatives.

It would recognize that, after three vice-presidential nominations — Spiro Angew twice and Thomas Eagleton once — have been carelessly made, more deliberation is desirable.

WOULD A ROCKEFELLER CHALLENGE SUCCEED? Probably not. Mr. Ford is committed to Rockefeller and wants to keep him on the ticket. Many of his political advisers believe that Rockefeller would add more strength to the GOP ticket than any alternative. Even if Mr. Ford acceded to an open vote, it would be evident that he would want Rockefeller to win.

MR. FORD'S OWN CANDIDACY IS A CERTAINTY. There is no longer any reason to doubt that he wants the nomination — and will get it. Here are his plans:

He is already organizing a nationwide fund-raising drive to obtain government matching funds under the new law.

He doubts whether he will be challenged in any major primary but will be ready to enter any contest if there is a challenge.

The presidential campaign itself will be managed under the aegis of the Republican National Committee.

Mr. Ford's intimates have never doubted he would seek election. They point out that he has never run away from a political contest.

NO DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE IS GETTING THE JUMP. Among party leaders and workers, not a single contender is pulling ahead of the pack. Henry Jackson, Hubert Humphrey, Lloyd Bentsen, Morris Udall and Jimmy Carter are bunched with none getting more than 11 per cent.

One of the shrewdest Republican professionals gives this assessment: "At the convention no Democratic candidate will get more than 30 per cent of the delegates on the early balloting. They will end by picking Teddy Kennedy. Wallace will not again lead a third party."

WHERE ARE THOSE DOMINOES NOW? If you had a dollar — or even a dime — for every time the critics of the U.S. role in Vietnam poo-hooed the idea that the Communist conquest of South Vietnam would have any impact on other Southern Asian nations, you would be well off.

The "dominoes" are not just tilting; they are already falling, and what was so blindly dismissed as unproved theory is now proving to be grim reality.

Cambodia has fallen. Laos is in the Communist grip. Thailand is becoming a pro-Peking neutral. The Philippines are moving away from the United States. Singapore is in peril. Indonesia is holding its breath.

So far, not one who disdained the domino theory in the past has been willing to admit he was wrong. The time may come.

Stories Behind Words By William Penfield

Word-builders

A number of English words were formed from the root "tract," which comes from the Latin "trahere, tractus" (to draw, drag or take).

Some of the prefixes that are used with it are: ex (out of or away from); re (again or back); pro (for, forth or forward); con (with or together with); and de (down, off or away).

Combining the prefixes with the root produces the following words: Extract (to take out of); retract (to take back); protract (to draw forth or extend); contract (to draw together); and detract (to take away).

One of Ford's pet projects turns into patch of thorns

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

The $2.2 million was supposed to be squeezed out of various government agencies, with the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) coughing up the first $100,000.

This raised another conflict, since the anticipated recipient formerly headed the LEAA. If Leonard accepted the $100,000, the erstwhile LEAA chief would be confronted with an ethical if not legal problem.

His successor at the LEAA, Don Santarelli, was disturbed over the conflict. After the session ended, according to a confidential memo, Santarelli told another official that he planned to tell Ford the proposal was "lousy."

But "Mr. Santarelli said he did not plan to mention to the Vice President his other concern . . . a possible conflict of interest in LEAA support for this proposal," the memo adds.

"His reference is to what he refers to as correspondence from Jerris Leonard on such a proposal less than one year after Jerris left the LEAA position."

In the end, Santarelli refused to allow LEAA funds to be used for the Leonard project. But the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, whose director Morris Chafetz has been under FBI investigation for expense account chiseling, was less scrupulous.

Chafetz not only provided funds but assigned a bright official, Robert Beauregard, to push the project. In compliance with the law, Beauregard organized a review panel to study it. He promptly helped appoint one of Leonard's political pals, Robert Knowles, to help review Leonard's contract.

Both Leonard and Knowles are powers in Wisconsin politics. Leonard once ran for the U.S. Senate in Wisconsin, and Knowles was president pro tem of the Wisconsin Senate.

Not surprisingly, the project was cheerfully approved by the review panel, which also selected Wisconsin as one of the first states to participate. But a special advisory council still had to give final approval.

None other than the ubiquitous Robert Knowles emerged as the advisory chairman, with Robert Beauregard as the sole consultant. It turned out that Beauregard had quit his government job and had signed on as a $250-a-day consultant for the project he had helped to establish.

When we asked the irrepressible Leonard about this garden of conflicts, he cooed happily: "I am so clean." He had been off the LEAA payroll the required year, he swore, before seeking the LEAA grant.

Knowles told us he was paid nothing for his service. Initially, he hadn't wanted to choose Wisconsin as one of the first states to benefit from the grant, he said.

Beauregard said he saw no conflict in accepting a consultant's fee from the same project he had supervised while he was on the government payroll.

As for President Ford, he started the wheels rolling for his old friend Leonard and then, apparently, lost touch with the whole thing.

Washington Whirl: President Ford, who is about to step into Henry Kissinger's shoes and resume personal diplomacy in the Middle East, has been told forcibly by advisers that no Arab-Israeli agreement is possible without Soviet support. He is optimistic, however, that he can sell the Kremlin on a joint Soviet-American settlement . . . Secretary of State Kissinger was so preoccupied with the Middle East a year ago that he didn't get around to reviewing the ramifications of India's nuclear explosion for six months. In the meantime, intelligence reports warned that several nations had gone ahead with the development of nuclear weapons. Now belatedly, Kissinger is urgently trying to tighten the nuclear non-proliferation treaty. . .

The FBI still hasn't been able to locate the elusive Patty Hearst. For more than a month, according to our FBI sources, the G-men haven't picked up a warm clue. Patty has been able to elude them, they believe, because only a tiny, light circle knows her exact whereabouts.

Fifth year

Social Security system falling under increasing attack

(First in a series of five columns)

Sylvia Porter

The mounting attacks on our Social Security System are not new. Many, in fact, are rehashes of scripts recorded by a former governor when in the 1950s (before he entered politics) he was hired by the National Assn. of Life Underwriters to help head off congressional improvements in Social Security that might cut into sales of life insurance.

A few years later, the 1976 presidential hopeful obligingly repeated his attacks—this time for the American Medical Assn.—in a series of records for physicians' wives to play to help build up opposition to Medicare. It was called Operation Kaffee Klatch. The popular politician did a similar spiel on behalf of candidate Barry Goldwater.

Even in the 1950s, though, the attacks were not new but borrowed in large part from those who had opposed Social Security at the time of its enactment in 1935.

But today, the hackneyed claims that the system is "basically unsound," "headed for bankruptcy," "doomed to collapse," "a deception foisted on the people" come at a particularly bad time.

But Watergate, Vietnam, galloping inflation and now soaring unemployment have shaken public confidence in our government institutions. The cost of living spiral has caused all of us (except the very wealthy) to look more closely at deductions from our paychecks. The deepest and longest slump of the entire post-World War II period has created widespread fear of the future.

This is a grim background against which to circulate vicious attacks on Social Security — attacks made up of slashing half-truths and untruths.

This is a most unfortunate atmosphere in which to have administration officials in charge of running the system make "less than effective" (to put it gently) responses to comments which are not only clearly inaccurate but also extremely biased.

On top of all this, the trustees of the Social Security trust funds had to make an announcement that revisions in the long-range estimates of Social Security income and outgo were required. It sounded ominous. Changes in our lifestyle — the Pill and the declining birth rate — would result, apparently, in a lower-than-expected number of Americans of working age in the next century, just about the time that the large numbers born during the post-World War II baby boom will be reaching retirement age.

The Social Security contributions of the reduced work force, beginning in the year 2010, might not be enough to cover the cost of paying benefits to the swollen numbers of retired.

Offsetting factors

That there are offsetting factors has not been made clear. Nor has it been emphasized that the long-range estimates are indeed no more than "estimates," subject to many unforeseeable changes in our total economy, way of life and the Social Security program itself.

Meanwhile, the Advisory Council on Social Security was conducting the review of the entire Social Security program required by law every four years. During the review, a short-range financing problem came to light — a result of the nightmare coincidence of an inflation spiral and slumping payrolls. The problem: the cost of keeping SS benefits up-to-date with cost of living increases was outrunning the additional income from higher wages.

Next, when President Ford proposed to place a ceiling on the cost-of-living increases due beneficiaries, older people swamped Social Security and congressional offices with pitiable protests. Younger working people saw the threat of increased SS taxes and the spectre of no pay-off in their own retirement years.

Deeply concerned over the anxiety caused by the scary headlines and the attacks, a bipartisan group of five former secretaries of Health, Education and Welfare and three former Social Security commissioners joined in issuing a white paper, "Social Security: A Sound and Durable Institution of Great Value." It provides a basis for an informed, objective debate on keeping the system sound.

This week's series of columns is designed to kick off that informed debate on the system's financial problems and how they may be solved and to lead up to the fundamental question of all:

Should we continue to support contributory social insurance which is designed to prevent poverty from occurring?

Or should we place our basic reliance on measures to relieve poverty after it has become a fact?

The answer must be yours.

Tuesday: Social Security's short-range problem.

Scott enjoying role as President's defender

By MARK BROWN
Ottaway News Service
Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Once again Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa. is standing alongside and defending a Republican President whose performance during a crisis prompted a lot of anxious moments around the country.
This time Scott is enjoying his role a lot more, however. It was just two years ago that the senior senator from Pennsylvania emerged from a White House meeting to announce that evidence existed which proved Richard Nixon was not involved in the Watergate cover-up.

Scott ate those words a year later, after Nixon had resigned, trying to explain that he had been misled by the White House. Overall he was thoroughly embarrassed by the incident.

This time Scott is sticking up for President Gerald Ford, whose decision to open fire on the Cambodian Navy last week sent more than a few shockwaves through the war-weary Congress.
Ford came out looking like a hero for the time being, however, and Senate Minority Leader Scott now tops the long list of those praising the President's performance under immense pressure.

During an interview this week, Scott said Ford's performance heightened his approval in Congress and the country, and proved he is "up to the job" as president.
"He (Ford) took all the risks of failure without personal considerations," Scott beamed. "That shows we already have the man we need as president. He's a firm man, but he knows how to balance his responsibilities."

Another Republican sitting back to see how serious Scott is about running again is Rep. E. G. "Bud" Shuster, R-West Providence Township. Shuster, a conservative, says he has been approached about running for the Senate but has not made up his mind.
Meanwhile, Scott is concentrating on the Ford-Rockefeller ticket (he strongly favors Rockefeller over a more conservative candidate), and his own re-election efforts remain secondary.

This time, however, he is genuinely convinced that he is supporting the right man, and will not end up with egg on his face as he did a year ago.
Since Ford's tactics worked, no one has really come forward to dispute the issue with Scott.
Meanwhile, the Senator is getting ready to hit the campaign trail for Ford and spread the news of the President's triumph. Scott said he is already involved in the Ford-Rockefeller reelection effort, and intends to work hard for the team.
He also hopes to slip a few words in on his own behalf, since he is also up for re-election next year and insists he does not intend to retire.

Vote but don't endorse

By ALAN GOULD JR.
Whenever we head toward the climax of a primary election campaign, people at The Pocono Record are often asked why we don't take sides — as we do in almost all general elections — in editorials.
Few newspapers do these days because most of us consider ourselves independent politically. In much older days newspapers were often partisan. In fact it was not uncommon for a newspaper to be the "voice" of one party or the other. In further fact, a "newspaper" was often born (and underwritten) exclusively to espouse the cause of a single party or even a single candidate.

In those days it was not only the editorials that took sides. The news columns were simply not open to even a mention of the opposition candidates; at least no "mention" that could possibly help.

Today the pre-election goal of The Record, and most other newspapers, is unbiased and, as far as possible equal, coverage of all reasonable candidates. And in the primary we refrain from suggesting to either Republicans or Democrats who their best candidates are. At this stage, it is their own business since technically, no one assumes office as the result of a primary.

A lesser consideration involved in not taking primary editorial position is that a choice within a party may not be the choice against the other party's candidate in November. There's a strong potential for contradiction and misuse or, at least misunderstanding, of statements made in May applying to a situation in November.

Many must have observed, for example, that some of the primary candidates this season, have dredged up editorials and columns from as long as 35 years ago to support their cases. The tactic may be legitimate but is frequently misleading.

Once the voting ends Tuesday things are clarified for the long trek toward November 4 and eventually The Record like most newspapers, will make voting suggestions based on its evaluation of the rivals.
How do we do this? Essentially it is a news staff function but more elaborate than the production of regular editorials.

Ron Bouchard, our editor, writes almost all our daily editorials. Some are based on comments from his own staff, a few on prods from his publisher and others via suggestions from many of you as readers and citizens.

Indeed, one of the editor's main jobs is to assess our community's situations and predicaments and then comment with the design of stirring up thought and action as well as placing credit and blame.

For the purpose of evaluating candidates leading toward editorial endorsement we call a meeting of our "editorial board", usually two or three weeks before election day.

At The Record the board has regularly been composed of the three top editors and the top two administrators. Today that means Bouchard, Bob Groff, news editor, Gary Grossman, city editor, John Del Santo, assistant general manager, and myself.

Although we work together and have the same common goal of obtaining the best for our community, it is unusual for all choices to be unanimous in any given year. But majority rules the board even to the extent that we will occasionally reach a stalemate and decide not to endorse for a particular office.

There have been many times, in fact, that some of us have voted the opposite of The Record's official "position". But the "second rule" of membership on the board is to vote — one way or the other — as we all should be doing tomorrow, even if as an independent it can only be for the amendment on top of the ballot.

Weekly roll call

OTTAWAY NEWS SERVICE
Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — In key roll call votes last week, both the House and Senate approved special assistance funds to help resettle refugees from Cambodia and Vietnam.

The Senate also broke a four-year filibuster and voted to set up a nonregulatory agency to represent the interests of consumers.

The House failed to override a Presidential veto of the Emergency Farm Assistance Act, but passed a bill appropriating $5.3 billion in emergency employment funds for the next fiscal year.

The Senate:
— A measure to appropriate $40.5 million as aid to refugees from Indochina, passed 79-2.

Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) yes; Sen. Richard Schweiker (R-Pa.), yes.

— Final passage of a bill to establish a nonregulatory agency in the executive branch to represent the interests of consumers in federal agency and court proceedings, approved 61-28.

Scott, yes; Schweiker, yes.
— A previous motion to invoke cloture and cut off debate on the consumer protection measure, passed 71-27.

Scott, yes; Schweiker, yes.
— An authorization of $1.1 billion to the National Railroad Passenger Corporation (Amtrak) through October 1, 1977, passed 75-22.

Scott, yes; Schweiker, yes.
— A previous amendment to delete language increasing from 60,000 to 85,000 the annual salary paid to the president of Amtrak, defeated 34-61.

Scott, no; Schweiker, no.
The House:
— A bill authorizing $507 million in assistance to Cambodian and Vietnamese refugees, passed 361-31.

Rep. Joseph M. McDade, R-10, yes; Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-15, yes.
— A previous amendment that sought to require the president to report every 30 days to Congress on the use of funds and the exercise of functions authorized in the bill, rejected 158-261.

McDade, no; Rooney, no.

— A motion to override the presidential veto of the Emergency Farm Assistance Act, two-thirds needed for passage, failed 245-182.

McDade, yes; Rooney, no.

— A bill appropriating $5.3 billion in emergency employment funds for the fiscal year beginning July 1, passed 293-109.

McDade, yes; Rooney, yes.

— A measure to promote tourist travel in the U.S. It authorizes $2.5 million for fiscal years 1976 through 1978 for domestic travel promotion, and a total of $85 million for international travel promotion for fiscal years 1977 through 1979, passed 287-132.

McDade, yes; Rooney, yes.

An Open Message to the Residents of:

MT. POCONO BORO, TOBYHANNA TOWNSHIP, COOLBAUGH TOWNSHIP, TUNKHANNOCK TOWNSHIP

My name is Michael J. Wetmore and I am an Attorney by profession. I am a graduate of Lycoming College and Temple University School of Law, and I am a candidate for the office of District Magistrate. I have been a practicing attorney for four years in Monroe County and I am well aware of the problems facing our area. I am the only candidate for the office of District Magistrate who is a practicing attorney. I am trained in the law and experienced in the Magistrate Court system.

Make your vote count, because on Primary Election Day, May 20, 1975, you will have a most unique opportunity. On that day you can put legal experience and knowledge of the law to work for you; you can elect an Attorney as District Magistrate.

I ask your support and your vote to elect Attorney Michael J. Wetmore as your District Magistrate.

Thank you,

Ordered and paid for by Michael J. Wetmore, Esq.

Don't waste your vote . . . . .

My fellow Republicans, tomorrow, May 20th, you will go to the polls to cast your vote for candidates for public offices. Perhaps the most important of these is to select those TWO candidates for County Commissioner who will represent your party in November's general election.

If we choose wisely NOW . . . if we urge our friends and relatives to join us NOW in making the right choice, we will be successful in being a part of selecting good government.

Our success, however, depends entirely on three things. First, that we realize the importance of the Primary Election. Secondly, that we take the time to sincerely compare the qualifications of the individual candidates, and, finally, that on election day we do not fail to make our votes count.

Failure to vote at all eliminates any possibility that you will have a voice in government. But to make your selection for some reason other than the careful consideration of the merits of the candidates and their opportunity to represent you is almost wasting your vote.

If you agree that the job of managing the affairs of Monroe County is far more complex than it was a few years ago, and that you would like someone whose education and background permits him to analyze complex information and make prudent and responsible decisions; if you would like someone who has served the community in many activities to which he has given leadership which enabled him to acquire an understanding of human needs; if you think that person could bring a completely new and objective view to the office with no obligation to any person or group, I urge you to vote for me.

DON'T WASTE YOUR VOTE! Read the ballot carefully, go to the end of the line and pull the lever over my name. Many thanks for reading my message.

Yours for good government,
Jesse D. Pierson

NEW YORK — Telly Savalas this year will pick up an easy $400,000 for TV commercials; another couple of million starting in quick-flicks, more than a million a year as "Kojak" and that's the heady, naked truth . . . The Mike Wallace-Harry Truman segment of "60 Minutes" is in for a shot in the authenticity: the Wallace researchers goofed — didn't bother to check the truth involved in James Whitmore's most amusing Harry Truman one-malice show; seems the Truman scenes concerning Gen. Douglas MacArthur simply were Harry-aggrandizing comically fictional license; but as a TV documentary, simply a lie.

Romance? thirtyish Mort Gottleib beamed Anita Loos to the Ingrid Bergman matinee at the Shubert, proving gentlemen prefer 80-year-old cute brunettes . . . Tuppity-top network boss became an Episcopalian . . . Not only ships and planes disappear in the off-U.S. Atlantic area: Yonkers Record newslang Maggie Condon, flying to Palm Beach, discovered on arrival her copy of best-selling "The Bermuda Triangle" got deep-sixed en route . . . Another tasty headquarters for delicious pasta: Rattazzi's (9 E. 48th St.) spaghetti . . . Three pals couldn't get him into one swinging Manhattan bash and he sulked and sulked — until he opened his mail and found a White House invite; followed by gloating . . . Their pals suspect Prince Alexis Obolensky of the Backgammon Kingdom rendezvoused in Europe with Joy Edwards lovely stepkid of Foolish Pleasure's Ky. Derby winner-owner John Greer — and that it may be a pre-honeymoon romp . . . Most-famed society bandleader Meyer Davis checked out of the hospital before gossips knew he was in . . . Japanese restaurant owner Rocky Aoki (Benihana chain) used to own a dozen expensive cars, but is down to his last four Rolls-Royces. Three of them weren't running as he dashed off to the repair shop.

Betty Betz, artist wife to Canadian multi-rich sportsman Frank McMahon, is hobbling around to Palm Beach potties after knee-surgery . . . Jackie Kennedy Onassis' photog-nemesis Ron Galella has the cops' eyes on him: he busted through the police barricades at Paul Newman's Lincoln Center salute — and mobs of fawn club lemmings fanned in after him . . . "Same Time, Next Year" playwright Bernard Slade, the Canadian who wrote this decade's biggest Bdwy. comedy hit, took to the typewriter because as a (pretty good!) actor he was so embarrassed at the indignity of nasty rebuffs when scrounging for stage roles. The pen became mightier than the sordid turn-downs he suffered at the hands of several producers who betimes learned debt has its sting.

The newest famous photog Susan Ford did her clicking thing at Ringling Bros. Circus in Madison Square Garden — a bleachers of secret servicemen lensing support. Susan went virtually unrecognized, another not so silent tribute to the fascination for the Big Top by its sellout audience . . . Ring Lardner's Alibi Ike never would've believed it: Mets' pitcher Tom Seaver confessed he only reads sports accounts of games he wins; wife Nancy gets stuck with the losing-day inkstained needles . . . Neil Simon hints his Smith & Dale-inspired "Sunshine Boys" will be his last successful play to open on Bdwy.; he'll produce his next in L.A. (even tho' he owns his own Bdwy. theater).

Consider this: one song only, "Poor Butterfly," finances an annual Raymond Hubbell Scholarship. Willing to struggle composers by the late Mr. Hubbell, who wrote just the music; the late producer John Golden wrote the words, an out-and-out paraphrase of the plot of Puccini's "Madame Butterfly."

That lone Hubbell half-royalty for one song written in 1916 has financed the annual $20,000 scholarship since the composer's death in 1954.

Ann Landers

Two sides

Dear Readers: Every now and then I hear from a reader who spots himself in the column and asks to tell HIS side of the story. Today's column is truly extraordinary. Here's the original letter that prompted the follow-up:

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I accumulated $2500 in a local bank by depositing $5 and $10 a week. Our 20-year-old son, who does not live at home, entered our house when we were on vacation. He stole our passbook and withdrew $100 by forging his father's signature to our joint account.

He then proceeded to forge his father's name at this bank and other branches in the city. Within two weeks he emptied the account of all but $5.

He requested a duplicate bankbook, returned the original to our home and kept the duplicate, in the hope that he could replace the money before we found out what he had done.

We might have been spared all this grief had one person been alert. Why did they give him a duplicate passbook? How could so many people in the respected profession of banking have used such poor judgment?

Syracuse, N.Y.

Dear Syracuse: I find it fascinating that your complaint is against the bank employees when the real tragedy is that your son is a crook.

My Chicago banking consultant suggests that you contact the senior officer of your bank and seek his counsel. MY advice is to try to get that boy into therapy at once.

This letter arrived today: Dear Ann: I am the 20-year-old son who took my parents' bankbook and forged my father's signature.

First, I'd like to tell you a little about my past. At age 16 my parents considered me a discipline problem and had me committed to a psychiatric hospital in Syracuse. After six months the doctor said, "This hospital is no place for you. I'm recommending a private school."

The day after my 17th birthday, off I went. I soon discovered it was no private school but a reformatory full of criminals. I learned every trick of the trade in that rathole. Forgery, robbery, flim-flam — you name it. You called me a crook, Ann. Granted I did some criminal things, but I didn't pick them up on my own, nor would I have associated with such people if I hadn't been exposed to that environment.

I've tried every which way to help myself. I've sought the help of professionals when things got rough. I'm now 21 and still as bad off as I was back then. I called my mother the night your column appeared only to find that four warrants were out for my arrest in Syracuse. She said it was an act of God that I happened to read that column and maybe now I will learn something.

But I can't do it on my own. I was thrown out of the house at age 18 and have had no relationship with my parents whatsoever. It has been one hell of a struggle. If only I had parents I could talk to. But they've disowned me and I am running in fear. Can you help?

I Want to Stop

Dear Want to Stop: Your need for love is heartbreaking. But don't give up — you CAN be helped.

Call the Mental Health Clinic at Upstate University Hospital, 750 East Adams, Syracuse, N.Y., telephone 473-5540. Ask for an appointment with the psychiatrist in charge. I've already phoned in your behalf and they are waiting to help you. Please let me know how you get along.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS HAVE TO SAY ABOUT NANCY SHUKAITIS

The Washington Post

MONDAY, APRIL 12, 1965

Hearing Aid Needed

A lady from East Stroudsburg, Pa., has written us a spirited letter that makes an excellent point about the Federal Government's land-acquisition program. Nancy Shukaitis is one of several thousand persons affected by the plan to create a Tocks Island National Recreation Area. She asserts that there have been no official hearings on the proposal held in or near the projected recreation area. The only hearings have been in Washington.

A persistent and useful gadfly, Mrs. Shukaitis turned up at a hearing of a House Interior Subcommittee to make just this point. Chairman Ralph Rivers was asked what he thought of holding hearings in Stroudsburg. "I think they are fine and dandy," he said. "I am looking forward to seeing your beautiful region." So a hearing was scheduled for April 22 in Pennsylvania. But we are now informed that due to the extended consideration for the voting rights bill, the hearing has been postponed, and may not be held at all.

There is an important general principle involved in this single small incident. Why, asks Mrs. Shukaitis, aren't local hearings "mandatory whenever the Federal Government has designated private lands and homes for public use?" The Government is in the midst of a major land acquisition program, not only for national parks and recreation areas but for highways, too. Certainly procedural fairness dictates that where feasible local hearings should be held before a final decision is made.

The House Interior Committee informs us that an acquisition proposal involves displacement of an entire community. But there is no fixed procedure of uniform pattern in either House or Senate legislative hearings. Isn't it time that Congress considered a better neighbor policy? Administrative hearings held by the Department of Interior are not substitute for an open hearing before the legislative branch, which is the decisive vote.

One of the complaints of colonists before the American Revolution was that the Crown forced its overseas subjects to journey across the Atlantic to settle certain disputes. It is a bad kind of modern colonial policy to impel American citizens to cross a continent in order to defend what they feel are their property rights.

Dresses

I go to the movies and watch television to be entertained, not to sit there and fall apart. Sitting through the Towering Inferno the other night, I found myself slouching in my seat, my legs hopelessly entangled and locked with one another, beads of sweat gathering on my forehead. Unable to stand looking at the screen, I buried my head in my husband's sweater. Finally, I opened one eye and whispered to him, "Is it over? Has Faye Dunaway fallen out of her dress yet?"

There is something about a dress slit to the waist supported only by gravity and good posture that makes me tense. When Rita Moreno ran to the podium for her Tony in her divided to the waist halter, I nearly fainted, and when Adrienne Barbeau slouches on the Carson show, I instinctively throw my body across the screen when there is no one in the room but the dog.

I guess it all goes back to my mid-Victorian upbringing where we were taught, "What good is a dress if you can't play the violin in it." In shopping for a long dress the other week, however, I couldn't resist taking a halter dress to the fitting room with me.

"What holds it up?" I asked the salesperson. "Gravity and prayer . . . not necessarily in that order."

"I see. The earth revolves and draws all the bodies in its sphere toward the center of the earth at the rate of 32 feet per second and the dress stays up."

"That's easy for you to say," she said. "Personally, I'm holding out for prayer."

"What do you think?" I asked, standing erect, not daring to breathe. "I think the dress should sue you for non-support." "Maybe I should go back to the keyhole neckline," I observed.

"I personally think you should seal off the entire chest," she said.

"Look, if Faye Dunaway can last through a cocktail party, a major fire, 35 explosions, smoke, water and a ride on a see-through elevator with a broken cable, I can handle this dress."

"I'll throw in an asbestos bra," she said tiredly.

Feels put down

By Jean Adams

LEVELS: (Q.) My school is divided into sections. I'm really mad because some of the people in the higher sections are always reminding me in some way that I'm not as intelligent as they are.

I always say, it's just the curriculum level. And that's the truth. Should I say anything when they talk about me being in a lower section or should I just be quiet?

Put Down
in Pennsylvania

(A.) All you life you will be faced with people who get their kicks out of finding excuses to feel, act or talk superior to other people. Do not let them stop you with their bragging and posturing.

Let their catty remarks slide off and tell yourself that what really counts is how a person feels inside. These people don't feel at ease inside. If they did, they wouldn't have to boast so much.

BOY-LESS: (Q.) I don't have a boy friend and never have had one. This is really getting me down. I never know what to say to a boy or anyone. Everyone is always saying how quiet I am. But when I start talking, I bore people and they either ignore me or talk to someone else, so I just shut up. Please help me. I am about to give up on myself.

16 in Virginia

(A.) The secret of not boring people is: don't talk when you have nothing to say or don't know what you are talking about.

Listen to the talk of those around you. Find out the subjects they are interested in. Study up on those subjects. Then you will have something to say and you will know what you are talking about. People, including boys, will listen to you.

Don't trade drugs with friends

One of my friends was given thyroid pills by her doctor to help her lose weight. She wants me to try her pills. I'm overweight and tempted. Is it safe to try it?

Mrs. J.S., Pa.

Dear Mrs. S.:
My reaction to your request is an emphatic "NO." The trading of any kind of drugs is fraught with potential hazard. Certainly, a hormone such as a thyroid pill, taken without prescription, is particularly hazardous. I doubt that your friend's doctor prescribed thyroid tablets purely to control her weight. The hormone manufactured by the thyroid gland is very complex — reaching all the other hormones in the body.

Consequently, the indiscriminate use of thyroid tablets may upset the delicate balance that controls the proper functioning of all the other organs in the body.

There are some instances in which the underactivity of the thyroid gland is responsible for excessive weight gain. If after a complete study of the thyroid gland a deficiency is found, then and only then is a thyroid prescription used.

Two of our neighbors died of cancer. I must confess that I live in constant fear that I have caught this disease from one of them who was my close and intimate friend. Mrs. T.M., Ohio

Dear Mrs. M.:

Let me assure you and reassure you that cancers are not contagious. Once you have accepted this you will find that your unnecessary anxiety will be relieved.

Unfortunately, there is another aspect to your question that may not be as readily answered. The fear of cancer is definitely contagious. This fear can spread from person to person and do serious harm to the emotional stability of those who are easily susceptible to all fears.

There are many people like yourself who live in terror of acquiring diseases that may never afflict them. Because of this, they go through life missing many of the joys of day-to-day living. Their uncontrolled anxiety about cancer and other diseases disturbs their inner peace and deprives them of productivity and tranquility.

Let me repeat. Cancer is not catching. But the unfounded fear of acquiring it is highly contagious.

SHOULDER PAINS

Dr. Thomas F. Snyder, D.C., the shoulder joint has great mobility — perhaps the greatest range of motion in any joint of the body. For that reason, the shoulder is subject to considerable trauma. Forceful exercise, rheumatism, bursitis, sprains, occupational stress, postural defects — any of these can cause shoulder pain.

Pain is nature's warning something has gone wrong. Pain signals are caused by sensory nerve stimulation. The network of nerves coordinating movement of the shoulder and arms is called the brachial plexus. The brachial plexus supplies vital nerve energy transmitted from the brain, through the spinal column to the shoulder muscles.

Immediate attention to shoulder pain can prevent secondary complications; statistics show early treatment helps ensure favorable results. Consult your chiropractor when shoulder pain begins.

Guam refugees: Lid may blow soon

AGANA, Guam (UPI) — The refugee situation on Guam resembles a boiling kettle—if there isn't some relief soon, the lid may blow.

Three weeks ago, when the refugees first started arriving in the American island territory, it was predicted that there would be a maximum of 50,000 to be housed temporarily, with no more than 24,000 living on Guam at one time.

Tuesday afternoon the 100,000th refugee disembarked from the chartered U.S. merchant vessel Sergeant Andrew Miller.

Approximately half of them already had been flown to reception centers elsewhere, but the other 50,000 refugees were saturating the island's facilities.

The tent city at Orote Point, at first expected to hold a maximum of 24,000 persons, has since been expanded to accommodate twice that number.

It now has 3,490 tents, erected in what Gov. Ricardo J. Bordallo described as "nothing more than an open field of pens."

There are still 2,800 other refugees in the Philippines, who will have to be sent somewhere, plus another 2,000 in Singapore, who have been ordered to leave.

"I don't know if I'll get any of those people," Rear Adm. George S. Morrison said, "but I'm getting ready for them just in case."

The admiral, who hopes to retire Aug. 1, said 52,000 refugees "is just about all we can handle and still not endanger or inconvenience the local population."

The refugees are being flown to the U.S. mainland at the rate of 600 per day. At that rate it will be three to four months before Orote tent city can be closed.

The makeshift city has eight field kitchens to feed 40,000 people, who must stand in long lines for hours to get a hot meal of rice and meat.

By the time they get back to their tent the meal is no longer hot.

There are 191 toilets for the refugees at Orote and 300 showers. There isn't a great deal of privacy in the showers, and the toilets are of the same type used by troops in Vietnam—55 gallon drums cut in half and built over privies.

The privies have presented a problem of sanitation. Now they are being treated with lime and other chemicals and Morrison said the sanitation problem "is being licked."

"But we will still have a cosmetic (odor) problem as long as the camp is there," he said.

Some of the refugees just don't bother taking the long walk to the privies and back.

Residents of the nearby Navy housing area are complaining of the camp odors when the wind blows the wrong direction.

Although they are reluctant to admit it, authorities are concerned about the the rainy season, which is just around the corner.

The land on which the tents are erected is porous, and flooding is not likely in normal rains. But the refugees will either get soaking wet in the food lines or simply go without eating. The long walk to the privy will be even less attractive.

The wet season usually also brings an upsurge of virus infections on Guam, with or without an additional refugee population.

This is what most bothers Bordallo.

"These people are bound to suffer when the rains start," Bordallo said, "and for their benefit and ours it would be best to move these people as soon as possible or reduce the number significantly. Last Monday a 13-year-old boy died of pneumonia."

Bordallo said the longer refugees are forced to live in such crowded, uncomfortable conditions with minimal sanitation, the greater the chances of disease.

If a communicable disease starts, it will be difficult to control under the present conditions, Bordallo said.

This possibility could present a real danger to the 110,000 residents of the American island. There are now six cases of malaria under treatment as well as one confirmed and two probable cases of dengue fever.

Although the tent city was never intended to handle such a large number of refugees, Morrison said the $12 million allotted him has been sufficient so far.

"I haven't spent anywhere near that yet," he said.

Authorities said some of the money may have to be used to build more permanent refugee facilities.

While there is concern for the coming rainy season, the current dry spell has been causing water problems. There is no shortage of water, but the treatment and pumping facilities are being taxed.

"Every drop of water we can produce is being used right now," the admiral said.

Optimists honor Eatons

EAST STROUDSBURG — Nearly 200 people filled the pews of the East Stroudsburg United Methodist Church, 87 S. Courtland St., Sunday for a musical program in tribute to the Rev. and Mrs. Harold C. Eaton.

At the program, John J. Riley, president of the Optimist Club of The Stroudsburgs presented the Optimist of the Year Award to the Rev. Eaton.

The award was announced May 6 at a luncheon meeting of the Optimist Club, but was presented during the program Sunday.

The Rev. Eaton has retired effective in June as pastor of the East Stroudsburg United Methodist Church, which he has served since March, 1941.

After accepting the award, the Rev. Eaton said he felt it should not have been presented to him, but rather to his whole parish.

The music program was presented by the Ted Cornell Chorale, composed of more than 30 musicians from the metropolitan New York-New Jersey area.

Charles Swisher, administrator of the General Hospital of Monroe County, praised the Rev. Eaton for his service.

Roseto residents riding cycle

Collision kills two

EASTON — Two Roseto resi-dents, a 40-year-old man and an eight-year-old boy, died Sat-urday when the motorcycle they were riding hit a tractor-trailer at the intersection of Rtes. 248 and 33, two miles south of Nazareth borough.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Northampton County Coroner Joseph Reichel were Joseph David Emanuel, 40, of 416 Oak St., Roseto and Mi-chael Handlovich, eight, of the same address.

Tractor-trailer driver David J. Herbert, 35, of Harford, was not injured. The vehicle, owned by Richard S. Masters of Kingsley, was damaged in its left front saddle tank.

State police at Easton said the investigation into the acci-dent, which occurred at 11:10 a.m. Saturday, is continuing.

According to the police re-port, the tractor-trailer slowed down at the intersection of Rte. 248 and the off-ramp from Rte. 33 to head south.

When the tractor-trailer moved into the intersection, the motorcycle struck it on the left front below the driver's door at the diesel's saddle tank.

The motorcycle caught fire on impact, according to police. The rear wheels of the tractor-trailer then ran over both Emanuel and Handlovich.

Robbery

MARSHALLS CREEK — A 2:10 p.m. Sunday robbery of Lewis' Service Center, Bus. Rte. 209, south of Marshalls Creek netted four men $40.

Dorothy Lewis, 60, stood back as ordered when four white males entered the store and removed $40 from the cash register.

The men then ran out of the store and got into a 1965 of 1966 dark blue Chevrolet convert-ible with a black top, driven by a fifth white male. The car had been parked on the south side of the Stumble Inn.

Police said the car was last seen heading south on Bus. Rte. 209.

They were not armed. The investigation is continuing ac-cording to state police at Swift-water.

Arrest

BARTONSVILLE — Carl Gottier, 51, of 318 Brookside Ave., East Stroudsburg, was cited for "improper overtake" after a 6:50 p.m. Saturday ac-cident on Rte. 611 in front of the Bartonsville Hotel.

According to state police at Swiftwater, Herman G. Gilpin, 65, of Easton was southbound on Rte. 611 attempting to make a right turn when Gottier turned to the left to avoid him.

However, Gottier struck Gil-pin on the left rear side, caus-ing $300 damage to Gilpin's car and $500 damage to his own. There were no injuries.

Burglary

SNYDERSVILLE — The Ham-ilton Township summer home of Sergio Piomelli, 44, of 110 Bleeker St., New York City, was burglarized some time between May 12 and 16, according to state police.

Police found the front door latch broken and a portable black and white television missing.

The home is located one mile north of SnYdersville on town-ship route 434.

Man injured

EAST STROUDSBURG — An East Stroudsburg man was listed in satisfactory condition Sunday at the General Hospital of Monroe County following a head-on collision at 1:34 a.m. Saturday.

Harold Munch, 68, East Stroudsburg R.D. 5, was listed in satisfactory condition with multiple confusions and abra-sions, facial lacerations and possible internal injuries.

East Stroudsburg police said a car driven by Munch was traveling south on North Court-land Street when it veered into the path of a car driven by Daniel Rose, 29, Brodhead Ave-nue, which was northbound.

Police said Rose received bruises and Munch was charged with failure to drive on the right side of the street.

Damages to the Munch car were $1,800 while damages to Rose's car were $1,500.

Grads warned not to waste earth's resources

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — If the space program did nothing else, it alerted humans to the squandering of earth's finite resources, Lt. Col. Alfred M. Worden, command module pilot for Apollo 15, told 622 graduating East Stroudsburg State College students during commencement Saturday.

"The space program has taught us technological things," Worden, 43, told about 4,000 people attending the outdoor commencement at the college. "But I like to think the most important thing we got out of the space program was a picture of earth taken from space."

"One thing that has done for us on earth is to show and to teach us that earth is a finite place. We cannot squander the resources we have left," stressed the astronaut who, in the summer of 1971, orbited the moon 75 times while two other men roved the lunar surface.

Worden told graduates the technology that sent him into space and revealed the problem of diminishing resources must now be harnessed by them for the good of all humans.

The astronaut said solutions to the world's problems remain subject to debate and parochial vision, with each nation basing solutions on its point of view.

Worden said a person in the United States feels the solution to the problem of over population is to cut down the size of the family. But to a person in India, a large family is an economic necessity; Indians see an increase in world food production as a solution, he said.

On energy, the astronaut said cooperation must replace bickering. Domestic oil supplies will run dry within 10 to 15 years, coal mining is environmentally hazardous, the dangers of nuclear power continue to be debated and solar power "is frightfully expensive."

"Now solutions must be based not only on technology but on human values... and the long range effects on our children."

Worden ended his address by reciting a portion of "Quietly, Like a Night Bird," from a book of poetry he wrote since his flight, "Hello Earth — Greetings From Endeavour".

"Earth: a small, bubbly balloon hanging delicately in the nothingness of space. Down there we argue of race and ideology and other trivia, I am a part of it, and yet apart from it; From here they seem all encapsulated in a prison where important philosophies go unnoticed while wars rage."

"Can man look outside his narrow window on life? From here, it never seemed clearer... We cannot escape that shrouded orb. Pull together, push together, embrace your fellow man — there is no other way to survive...."

Now chief of the systems studies division at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center near Mountain View, Calif., Worden said the division this summer will study how to build a space station between earth and moon that will accommodate 700,000 people.

The moon will be colonized for scientific research, but the space station will house non-scientists, he said. Worden, who studies the impact on people of new technology, said the day of huge space program budgets is over, and how far NASA will explore space is now up to the taxpayer.

Truck terminal opponents organize

STROUDSBURG — Opposition to a proposed truck terminal in Stroud Township surfaced again Sunday when residents of the affected area gathered 500 signatures in an effort to keep tractor-trailers out of their backyards.

Residents of the Mountainview Drive area of the township also plan a meeting for 7 p.m. tonight at the home of Dennis Douds to organize their protest of a freight terminal proposed for a 51-acre tract of land by Consolidated Freightways Inc. of Menlo Park, Calif.

"We're not against trucks or truck terminals, but we're against the establishment on a truck terminal here," Douds said. The proposed location is between Wigwam Park Road and Pocono Volkswagen and between Rte. 611 and property near the Stroudsburg Middle School on Chipperfield Drive.

Although all 51 acres of Consolidated's tract is zoned residential — except for a strip along Rte. 611 — a comprehensive plan proposed for Stroud Township would rezone the company's land commercial, Douds said.

Rezoning would enable Consolidated to build a "very large truck terminal," according to corporation spokesman Ray Kershner. Douds said petitions with residents' signatures will be presented to Stroud Township Supervisors and the township planning commission to prevent the rezoning.

Kershner said work on the terminal may begin next year.

Douds, who will be collecting signatures today, said residents believe the terminal will be detrimental to the area for a number of economic, social and aesthetic reasons.

Tractor-trailers will drive away customers who frequent the light-commercial shops along Rte. 611, endanger children and school buses, increase accidents on the congested highway and scar the scenery, Douds claimed.

"It will also devalue property in the area."

With many rumors about the size of the terminal, Douds said tonight's meeting was called "to listen to the rumors and trace down the facts."

Burnley wins Jaycee honor

EAST STROUDSBURG — Richard Burnley, 23, of East Stroudsburg R.D. 1 has been awarded the highest honor given by the Pocono Mountain Jaycees for outstanding service to the community.

Burnley, owner of Foxwood Farm Campgrounds and outgoing president of the Jaycees, was given the Distinguished Service Award for 1975 at the service organization's annual awards banquet Saturday night.

He has taught English at Stroudsburg High School and won more than 40 awards for debating while a student at East Stroudsburg State College. He is chairman of the campground committee of the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau and has overseen more than 100 Jaycee projects.

Burnley is also vice chairman of the Monroe County Republican Committee. ## Record staffers win state award

HARRISBURG — The Pocono Record staff members have won an award for their coverage of the Tocks Island squatter eviction from federal land in February, 1974.

Steve Drachler and Lora Sharpe were presented second place awards during Saturday's annual Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers Association and Pennsylvania Society of Newspapers Editors convention in Harrisburg.

Another Ottaway newspaper, The Sharon Herald, also took a second place award in the statewide contest. Its award was for a series of articles detailing kickback allegations and other irregularities in the state highway department.

John L. Moore of the Ottaway News Service Harrisburg Bureau and five other reporters, including Pocono Record City Editor Gary Grossman, received the award in the investigative reporting classification.

Drachler and Sharpe's award was under the news story classification. Their stories told how U.S. Marshals drove 65 squatters from land along the Delaware River they had illegally occupied for four years.

The investigative series included several stories by Moore and Grossman outlining alleged macing and kickbacks in Monroe County. Other contributors to the series included Sharon Herald staffers James Raykie and John Taylor; Edmund P. Klein, former chief of Ottaway News Service and Chris Evans, reporter for the Sunbury Daily Item, another Ottaway paper.

Both the Pocono Record and The Herald competed in Division II, for newspapers of 15,000 to 49,000 circulation.

Paris Flammonde's writing reflects occult, intrigue

Paris Flammonde

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — In his window shade-darkened house in East Stroudsburg, Paris Flammonde types the last chapter of his newest book about UFOs, surrounded by the music of Mozart, the scent of scotch and his privacy.

Although his book about Jim Garrison's investigation of the John F. Kennedy assassinations never sold 15,000 copies or made much money before it went out of print, Flammonde's style of factual, non-romantic writing is now in demand.

The sixth-largest publishing house in the country has asked him to write a scholarly book about UFO sightings and paid Flammonde what he terms an enormous advance to do so.

He is a jack of all arts: a painter, poet, writer, broadcaster, composer and chess enthusiast. In 1955, he started

New York City's first performance coffee house and in the early '60s, produced WOR radio's nighttime talk program, the Long John Nebel Show.

Flammonde fled his creative breeding ground in Greenwich Village when New York City "simply became ugly" and crime ridden, migrating to the tranquil Poconos three years ago to continue his freelance writing in a setting that did not offend what he describes as his Victorian sensibilities.

Of more interest than Flammonde's achievements are his inverted lifestyle (his day runs noon to dawn) and his interests in assassinations and the occult. He says he molds life to fit his moods and ignores the rest. The author also claims his family sprung from England's Queen Lady Jane Grey.

Flammonde's interests also are not typical. He loves fine food, wine, classical poetry and chess. He believes he was reincarnated and has a penchant for the occult and anything mysterious, unsolved and controversial, which lead to his writing seven books on mystic healers, assassinations and flying saucers.

Flammonde appears suddenly at the door of his house dressed in a black suit, ascot, shoes and socks and a white shirt. Grey has filtered through waves of black hair that surge over his head and has streaked his mustache and beard.

Although it is late afternoon, the drawn shades blacken the living room and Flammonde must turn on two lights by the couch so we can see.

He sits in a rose-colored chair sipping scotch from a goblet, calmly posing his lean figure like the starchy nobility portrayed in Victorian paintings.

"Anything that is unsolved is fascinating to me," he says with a faint British accent left over from his childhood in Richmond, Va.

"It was flat out a conspiracy," he says of the Kennedy assassination. Flammonde heard about the shooting from the radio of a car parked outside his first floor flat in Greenwich Village. "My automatic reaction was, no question at all, a conspiracy, and I was intrigued by the possibility that before the day was over there could be a coup d'etat."

Flammonde's book, "The Kennedy Conspiracy. An Uncommissioned Report on the Jim Garrison Investigation" of 1969, presents and criticizes Garrison's theory that at least three people — some probably coached by retired CIA agents — shot Kennedy.

"Incidentally, my theory is not the same as Garrison's," the author cautions. "I believe he was partially right. I believed no matter what he did, it would be an important footnote to history."

With the Kennedy book behind him, Flammonde returns to his interest in the occult. "The occult," he explains, "has to do with the relationship with human beings and any other entities or forces, entities having some intelligence."

Occult does not include witchcraft or parapsychology, he points out. "By virtue of discovering arcane chemistry, providing an individual follows the rules of the game, he (the occultist) is in control. The sorcerer can change the weather at will."

Does he have these powers? "Do you mean, can I conjure up these things? No one who is serious about the occult admits this. There is no answer to that. I'm an authority, a scholar if you will. I'm perfectly willing to admit I'm not a professional assassin."

Flammonde has discovered a connoisseur with classical tastes does not mesh smoothly with the present society. "I think one of the tragedies of the post-Korean era is people no longer care about people who do things better than themselves. You can carry humanism too far. We have become fascinated with the mediocre."

To coexist, Flammonde writes about what he wants, plays chess for the game's stimulation and reveals himself cautiously. "I socialize very little. My normal pattern is getting up a oneish and trying to avoid contact with all forms of human life."

Apparently his style works for him. "I have worked all my life to become what I am, whatever that is. Everything I've practically done people have come to me for." He plans a trilogy of novels.

Flyers continue Sabres' Spectrum jinx

Phillies' winning streak reaches seven, 5-1

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Greg Luzinski and Mike Schmidt belted RBI doubles in the third inning to help the Philadelphia Phillies defeat the Atlanta Braves 5-1 Sunday behind the four-hit pitching of Tom Underwood.

The victory was the seventh in a row for the Phillies who also have won 12 straight home games.

The Phillies scored twice in the second. Tommy Hutton walked and took third on Bob Boone's single. Mike Anderson beat out a bunt to score Hutton and Underwood singled to bring home Boone after both runners advanced on Darrell Evans' throwing error. Luzinski doubled home Gary Maddox, who had singled, then scored on Schmidt's double to make it 4-0 after three innings.

Notre Dame honors Sobrinski, Gibson

EAST STROUDSBURG — Jeff Sobrinski and Patti Gibson were honored as the outstanding male and female athletes at Notre Dame High School's annual athletic awards banquet Sunday night.

Sobrinski, a senior, was a standout performer for the Spartans in soccer, basketball, and baseball. He led the Spartans' soccer team in assists last fall and was named to the second team Wayne County League All-Stars as a half-back.

In basketball, Sobrinski led the team in scoring as a junior and came back from a knee injury last season to be the Spartans' top assist-man.

Sobrinski is currently batting .413 for the Spartans' baseball team and holds a seven-game hitting streak.

Gibson was chosen as the school's top female athlete for her play on the school's basketball and softball teams. She reached the 300-point plateau in scoring last season in basketball and is one of the top offensive and defensive players for the softball team.

Junior Mike Riley received the school's Spartan Award, which is presented to the school's top underclass athlete.

Riley led the Spartans' basketball team in scoring and was named to the first team on The Pocono Record's All-Pocono squad.

He was named to the Wayne County League second team of All-Stars as a fullback in soccer and is one of the top players on the Spartans' baseball team.

The Coach's Award for consistency ended in a tie between seniors Ken Luyet and Art Weglein.

Luyet performed on the Spartans' basketball team and is the shortstop for the baseball squad. Weglein, who led the Wayne County League in scoring last fall with 18 goals, is an infielder for the baseball team and served as manager of the basketball squad.

Ginny Harrison, who participated in girls' basketball, softball, and cheerleading, received the Coach's Award for female athletes.

Senior Tom Riley, who also received two special awards in recognition of his All-American soccer status as one of the top 33 players in the country, was named the top male student athlete.

Ann Barwick, who was a member of the cheerleading, basketball, and softball squads, was named the top female student athlete.

Other special awards were presented to Richard Martin, outstanding junior high basketball player; John Sobrinski, outstanding junior high soccer player; Lori Jo Sobrinski, most improved junior high girls' basketball player; and Nancy Richards, outstanding junior high girls' basketball player.

Easton's Al Loquasto bumped from Indy field

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Only two Johnny-come-lately's, Tom Bigelow and rookie Eldon Rasmussen, made successful qualifying runs late Sunday to complete the second-fastest lineup in Indianapolis "500" history.

Nine unsuccessful attempts to break into the 33-car lineup were made, including three in two different cars by former track record holder Jim Hurtubise.

The starting field, which will get one more opportunity to tune its engines in practice in Thursday's carburetion tests, averaged 185.057 miles per hour

—2.2 miles faster than last year.

However, the speed fell considerably short of the 1973 record of 192.3 established before the rules were changed to reduce engine power and the size of stabilizer wings.

Bigelow, Whitewater, Wis., averaged 181.864 m.p.h. to eliminate a car qualified last week by Rick Muther, Laguna Beach, Calif. Rasmussen, Indianapolis, the fourth "500" newcomer in the field averaged 181.910, ousting a car qualified by Al Loquasto, Easton, Pa. Loquasto was the first driver in a different car hoping to regain a spot in the field when the time ran out.

Both Rasmussen and Bigelow made the field on their second attempt.

Other unsuccessful attempts in qualifying were made by New Zealand's Graham McRae and rookie Billy Scott, San Bernardino, Calif. Both had two tries.

Scott, the last driver on the track hoping to make the field, blew the engine on his qualifying attempt coming out of the No. 4 turn and spun into the outside wall, but he escaped injury.

Cruz followed with a two-run double.

Gross made it 4-1 in the second inning with a run-scoring single. Roger Metzger then rapped one of his three singles and Cesar Cedeno was intentionally walked before Watson's line double to the left centerfield wall cleared the bases.

Snow ends season unbeaten

ALLENTOWN — Mohammed Diaa scored on a corner kick play midway through the second half Sunday to give the Pocono Snow a 3-2 victory over the Allentown Sports Club in a season-ending Lehigh Valley Soccer League contest.

Allentown took a 1-0 lead with seven minutes gone in the first half, but the Snow tied it up about 10 minutes later on a goal by Manny Tavormina.

Diaa then scored his first goal of the game to give the Snow a 2-1 edge and came through with what proved to be the game-winner in the second half.

The victory enabled the Snow to finish its Lehigh Valley Soccer League season with a perfect 12-0 record. The team will begin its summer exhibition schedule on Sunday, June 1 against Easton United.

In the preliminary midget game, the Pocono Midgets improved their record to 6-0 with a 5-0 triumph over Allentown.

John Proulx, Dick Quaresimo, Bob Gargone, Hank Pyatt, and Mike Stevens scored for Pocono.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — An enthusiastic recommendation made by Bobby Clarke last spring returned another tidy dividend Sunday afternoon when the Philadelphia Flyers moved closer to completing a successful defense of their Stanley Cup.

Philadelphia management approached Clarke, the team captain, to ask him if he thought Reg Leach could be of any help to the Flyers. Clarke, a teammate of Leach for three years in junior A hockey at Flin Flon, provided a rapid one-word endorsement.

"I told them 'definitely,'" Clarke said Sunday. "I then told them he was a good hockey player and would help whoever he played with."

The Flyers acquired Leach from California. He scored 45 goals during the regular season, and Sunday he took a pass from his old friend, Clarke, to score the first goal as Philadelphia edged the Buffalo Sabres 2-1 to take a 2-0 edge in games in their championship series.

"I figured Clarkie would get the puck and I placed myself in front of the net about 25 feet out," Leach said of his goal which broke a scoreless deadlock at 3:24 of the second period. "I shot with one motion and just caught the left side of the net."

After big defenseman Jerry Korab tied the score for the Sabres 2:18 deep into the final period, Clarke settled the issue barely 4½ minutes later when he slipped a backhand past goalie Gerry Desjardins during a power play.

"(Rick) MacLeish passed the puck to (Bill) Barber and when the defenseman went up to get him I was open," Clarke related. "I had my back to him (Desjardins). I don't know what he was doing."

Bernie Parent then protected the margin the rest of the session to register his third consecutive one-goal game.

Clarke, held to two goals in the preliminary rounds of the playoffs, now has five points in the first two games of this series.

23 area track stars qualify for state championships

EASTON — Five area high schools will be well-represented at the state track and field championships this weekend.

Stroudsburg, East Stroudsburg, Pocono Mountain, Pleasant Valley, and Pen Argyl combined to produce 23 state qualifiers in the District 11 Track and Field Championships at Lafayette's Metzgar Fields.

In the Class B boys competition, 13 local athletes qualified as area performers accounted for seven first place finishes and two district records.

Local girl athletes, led by a trio of record-setting winners from Pocono Mountain, were equally successful, as 11 girls qualified for the state championships.

Although no team scores were kept, Stroudsburg emerged as the class of the Class B field with its overall strength. The Mounties qualified individuals in five different events and had the winning team in the 880-yard relay.

The biggest surprise for the Mounties came in the 100-yard dash, where sophomore Bob Tilwick upset Jan Krawchuk of Palmerton.

Tilwick, who had lost to Krawchuk in a dual meet and in the Lehigh Valley League championships last weekend, just nipped Krawchuk at the wire with a winning time of 10.2 seconds.

Tilwick also combined with Craig Price, Rick Anglemeyer, and Rod Baechtold to give the Mounties a record-breaking performance in the 880-relay.

The four underclassmen easily outdistanced second place Blue Mountain and won the event with a time of 1:32.3. The old Class B. District 11 mark was 1:33.3, set by Bangor in 1968.

Frank Bell gave the Mounties their third first place finish of the afternoon with a throw of 57-2 in the shot put.

Bell, who holds the District 11 record of 57-7½, won the Lehigh Valley League meet last weekend with a throw of 57-6.

Sophomore distance runner Tom DeSchriver qualified in both the mile and two-mile runs with a pair of second place finishes.

DeSchriver finished behind Ed Dougherty of Pottsville in the mile with a time of 4:33.2 and was second to Dick Muncy of Blue Mountain in the two-mile with a time of 9:47.8.

Pagni pulls upset

Another big upset came in the discus, where the Mounties Tom Blair finished second to Morris Pagni of Pen Argyl.

Pagni, whose best previous throw was 155-6, broke his own personal mark by nearly 14 feet as he let loose with a throw of 169-1, which was a new district record.

Blair's throw of 163 was good enough for second place.

East Stroudsburg's Jim Kresge retained his unbeaten status in the 220 and 440-yard dashes with a pair of victories.

Kresge, whose only loss this season came in the 100-yard dash against Stroudsburg, won the 220 in the time of 23.1 seconds and completed his double victory with a winning time of 51.2 in the 440.

Pocono Mountain's Howard Kerrick also remained unbeaten enroute to victory in the high jump. Kerrick, who holds the Cardinals' school record of 6-2, only needed to clear 6 feet to win the Class B District title.

Pleasant Valley's Tim Serfass came through with his best throw of the season to finish second in the javelin with a throw of 165-6. Serfass' best previous throw was a 158-7 earlier this season.

Pen Argyl's Rich "Bubba" Ede, who finished second behind Bell in the shot put and teammate Jeff Sparrow in the high jump, also qualified for the state meet.

Three Cardinal records

In the girls competition, Pocono Mountain's Carla Rieger, Micki Divirgilio, and Jean Rinker all came through with record-breaking performances. Rieger won the 80-yard hurdles in the time of 12.3 to finish ahead of East Stroudsburg's Dawn Eilenberger.

Divirgilio won the shot put with a throw of 36-11½ and teammate Rinker captured first place in the discus with a distance of 98-4.

Lorie Hower of Pen Argyl won the 880-yard run in the record-setting time of 2:38.2. Freshman Sue Carden of Stroudsburg finished second in the event to qualify for the states.

Cheryl Burris of Stroudsburg, who finished second in the long jump with a leap of 16-2, and Pen Argyl's Pam Ser-fass, who was second in the high jump and shot put, also qualified for the state meet.

Warriors rip Bullets, 101-95

LANDOVER (UPI) — Rookie Phil Smith produced 10 of his 20 points in the final quarter Sunday and the Golden State Warriors came through with another cinderella comeback to defeat the Washington Bullets 101-95 in the first game of the NBA Championship playoffs.

The Warriors, who trailed by 16 points at one point in the first half, also got 24 points from Rick Barry to upset the Bullets on their home court in the opener of a best-of-seven series.

Smith, drafted from the University of San Francisco, came off the bench when starter Butch Beard got in foul trouble. In addition to his scoring spurt, the rookie also helped quarterback a stiff Warrior defense in the second half and help out as a playmaker.

With Washington ahead 72-71 at the opening of the fourth quarter, Smith tossed in two free throws and a jump shot to move Golden State into the lead. Later, with the score tied 80-80, fellow rookie Keith Wilkes hit for a field goal that put Golden State ahead for keeps. Charley Dudley came off a fast break for two more points and Smith added a field goal. The Warrior defense then staved off closing Bullet efforts to prevent the loss.

Elvin Hayes was high for the Bullets with 29 while Phil Chenier added 20.

Hayes and Kevin Porter combined for 22 first quarter points, enabling Washington to take a 27-17 lead at the end of the period.

The Bullets forged ahead 6-5 on a Porter layup after 3:32 of play and they steadily built their margin as Porter scored 13 points and Hayes added nine.

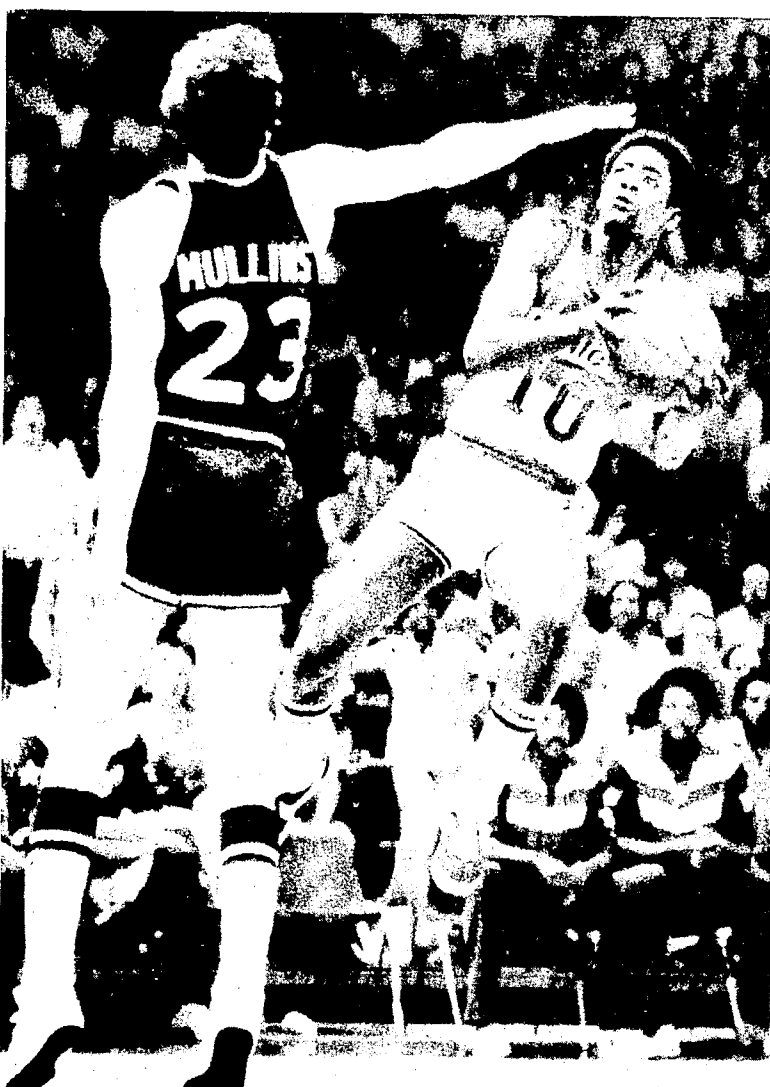

Barry got off to a slow start and registered only six points at the first period mark. At halftime, the Bullets led 54-40 and were shooting 51.2 per cent from the field while the Warriors had only 36 per cent.

But the Warriors battled back in the third quarter to cut the deficit to a single point with Clifford Ray hitting on eight points off the backboard to match Barry's total.

GOLDEN STATE (101)
Barry 8 2-4, Wilkes 4 2-2 10, Ray 1-4 9, Beard 1-2 3, C. Johnson 5-12 11, Bridges 0-0 0, Mullins 3-6 6, Smith 6-12 20, C. Johnson 1-0 2, Dudley 2-4 7, Dickey 4-11 9, Totals 38-25-101.

WASHINGTON (95)
Hayes 13-25 29, Rioridan 2-0 4, Unstut 4-2 12, Chenier 6-8 20, Porter 7-12 15, Weatherspoon 1-2 4, Haskins 5-12 11, Robinson 0-0 0, Totals 38-19-26.

Washington
27 18 23-79
Fouled out: Porter, Total fouls: Golden State 29, Washington 28. A: 19,035.

LEAPING LAYUP — The outstretched arm of Golden State's Jeff Mullins isn't nearly enough to stop Washington's Kevin Porter from flying through the air for a layup. The Warriors stunned the Bullets, 101-95 to take a 1-0 lead in the NBA finals.

Jolley gropes for alibis to explain Preakness loss

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI) — Trainer Leroy Jolley, still brooding over Foolish Pleasure's second place finish to Master Derby in Saturday's 100th Preakness Stakes, blasted the officials of Pimlico Race Course Sunday, blaming them for ending any chances his horse had of winning the Triple Crown.

"This track has been bad for 100 years and they're gonna leave it bad for the next 100 because it might cost money to fix it," fumed Jolley outside Foolish Pleasure's barn. "The dirt was as loose as hell and should have been better cared for. There was no attempt made to tighten it up because everybody was working on something else and not on the track.

"Master Derby loves a dead track, ran a great race and deserved to win but I still say Foolish Pleasure never ran on a track as bad as this."

What also incensed Jolley was what he called "the circus atmosphere" surrounding the track Saturday which was jammed by a record Pimlico crowd of 75,216, including some 35,000 people in the infield area.

"Those goddamn idiots in the infield block the view of the people who paid $25 a seat," said Jolley. "At no time could I see how Foolish Pleasure was handling the track until the stretch and then the horses are running right at you and you can't get a good view."

Jolley also criticized the presence of a team of Clydesdale horses which appeared on the track in ceremonies earlier in the afternoon.

"I don't think 75,000 people came out to see those Budweiser horses," added Jolley. "Those horses are for country fairs. The circus atmosphere doesn't add a thing. The good horses they had running in the race are enough to attract people."

Jolley noted that Foolish Pleasure, despite suffering only the second loss of a 13-race career that includes a victory in the Kentucky Derby earlier this month, came out of the race in fine condition and would probably be entered in the Belmont Stakes, the third leg of the Triple Crown series, June 7. "One thing I can say about the Belmont," said the 37-year-old Jolley, who has been a trainer since the age of 19, "is that the conditions will be a hell of a lot better and I'm sure they won't have those Budweiser horses."

When informed of Jolley's charges, Chick Lang, the general manager of Pimlico, said, "Leroy Jolley is a very capable trainer but he has to learn to lose more gracefully. When he was beaten in the Florida Derby he also complained about the condition of the track. We spend a lot of time and money on our track. We go overboard on Preakness Day and even hire 15 to 20 extra men."

"You'd think that as long as he's been in the business he'd learn by now. That was a real asinine statement about the Budweiser horses. Maybe, he likes Schlitz."

While Foolish Pleasure, along with third place finisher Diabolo, fifth place Avatar and sixth place Singh planned to ship to New York this morning, winner Master Derby, who returned a record Preakness win payoff of $48.80 for his one-length victory, headed back for Churchill Downs in Louisville early Sunday morning.

"I won't make up my mind about the Belmont until probably the end of the week," said trainer Smiley Adams. "I just might decide to skip it and freshen him up a bit."

The Preakness was the 21st race of Master Derby's career and the 11th triumph for the son of 1970 Kentucky Derby winner Dust Commander.

Warrior archers capture national mixed team title

NORWALK, Calif. — The description "national champions" can now be applied to the East Stroudsburg State College archery team.

Daily, a junior from East Stroudsburg, was third in the men's individual standings with 1965 out of 2220. Don Rabaska of San Bernadino won the title with 2000 with Scott Page of Palomar College second with 1970.

The team of Glenn Daily, Joel Lecker, Darlene Sedlock and Janet Kemmerer scored a total of 7392 out of a possible 8880.

San Bernadino College was second with 7379 while Riverside City College was third with 7272. Defending champion Arizona State failed to place.

Daily, a junior from East Stroudsburg, was third in the men's individual standings with 1965 out of 2220. Don Rabaska of San Bernadino won the title with 2000 with Scott Page of Palomar College second with 1970.

Lecker, a freshman from St. Mary's Pa., placed 11th with 1879. Teammate Keith Kleinsmith was 29th with 1782 and Dave Forney 34th with 1761.

ESSC was third in the men's team division for the second straight year with 5626. San Bernadino was the winner with 5833 with Ohio State second with 5650.

Sedlock, a junior from Bethlehem, was the Warriors' surprise leader in the women's individual class with 1797 for fourth place.

Kemmerer, a senior from Fort Washington who was fourth the last two years, finished 12th with 1751.

Debbie Green of Riverside, the winner two years ago when the tournament was conducted at East Stroudsburg, took the women's title with 1855. Debbie Hammer of San Bernadino was three points back with 1852.

The Warriors duplicated their 1974 finish in the women's team division with 5069 for fourth place. Other team members were Carol Stoltenberg 34th with 1521 and Paula Terry 48th with 1304.

Arizona State was the women's team champion with 5387. Next came the University of Arizona, 5161 and Riverside, 5115.

The winning of the national title represented the accomplishment of what has been the ultimate goal of the ESSC archery program.

The Warriors have won the Eastern District title and the Philadelphia Club Tournament the last several years.

The women's team has a dual meet record of 51-1 over the last seven years with six undefeated seasons. In its two years of varsity competition, the men's team is unbeaten with a 17-0 record.

"This is what we were aiming for and I couldn't be prouder and happier for members of our team," said Schumm Saturday night.

Major improvements by Daily and Sedlock made the difference from last Year's third-place finish in the mixed team division.

Daily climbed from 12th to third in the men's standings almost guaranteeing himself All-American status for the second straight year.

Sedlock jumped all the way from 43rd to fourth place. Her previous best performance was winning the college women's division in the ESSC invitation.

They joined Lecker, chosen as the school's outstanding male archer in his first season, and Kemmerer, who won the outstanding female archer award for the fourth time, on the title-winning team.

A total of 82 men and 52 women from 16 colleges took part in the three-day national tournament. Each archer shot an Easton 600, NAA 900 and middle distances FITA 720 round.

It was the second national team title won by an ESSC squad. The 1962 soccer team, coached by John R. Eiler, the school's athletic director, captured the NAIA soccer championship.

Mixed Team Division
ESSC 7392 (Daily 1965, Lecker 1879, Sedlock 1797, Kemmerer 1751, Terry 1304, Stoltenberg 1521, Smith 1953, Reilly 1900, Green 1855, Hildebrand 1852, Kleinsmith 1782).

Poppy Day plans set

EAST STROUDSBURG — Plans for Poppy Days, May 22, 23 and 24, were completed at the May meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary, Unit 346, East Stroudsburg.

Poppy Days are sponsored each year by the Legion Auxiliary to remind Americans of the sacrifices of life and health made by the men of the Armed Forces.

Anyone wishing to be a volunteer worker should call Mrs. Helen Counterman, chairman of the event.

Poppies will be distributed through the Stroudsburgs by George N. Kemp Post 346, the American Legion, auxiliary volunteers and their helpers.

The memorial poppies were made by disabled veterans in hospitals. The work is considered valuable as occupational therapy in addition to giving the disabled men the encouraging experience of earning money once again.

Miss Poppy 1975 is Miss Shanon Florey, junior member Unit 346. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Florey, Mount Bethel.

Science recognizes mother's milk value

HOUSTON (UPI) — Mother's milk appears to reduce the number of deaths from a serious disease in premature infants. Because of that, many medical centers have revived human milk banks.

Jefferson Davis Hospital in Houston is one facility that has started a such a milk supply, said Dr. John Kenny, a fellow at Baylor College of Medicine.

"It's only been the last four to six months that we've been pushing for breast milk and I'm just overwhelmed in the response we're getting," Kenny said. "We have mothers collect the milk in sterile containers, toss it in the freezer and freeze it solid."

"We go out once a week and collect a bucketful or two."

Kenny said hospitals used milk banks for many years until the advent of artificial formulas after World War II.

"I'm glad we're doing it," he said. "I'd like to put every baby on breast milk because it's good for the babies and the mothers too."

Kenny said it's too early for their work to tell, but the mother's milk apparently helps the tiny premature babies through a serious disease of the bowel known as necrotizing enterocolitis.

At Jefferson Davis last year, the city's largest baby center with 8,771 births, 30 babies were struck by the disease and eight died.

At that time many premature infants received formula but because of the mother's milk that is fed every premature baby, Kenny hopes to cut that to four out of 30 this year.

"We're not particularly innovative in the field," he said. "We're just following a lot of other people who have contributed far more extensively to this area than we have."

He said the disease is due to a lack of blood in the bowel because the blood is pumped to other, more vital organs of the body such as the brain and kidneys when the premature infant undergoes stress.

The lack of blood causes air bubbles to form in the intestinal walls and if the bubbles break, the child probably will require surgery. If caught early, the disease is treated with antibiotics and the child is fed intravenously.

"Babies who are fed breast milk have different bacteria in their gut than those on formula," he said.

Kissinger won't give up prize

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Backstairs at the White House: Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger considered giving up his Nobel Prize for peace in the aftermath of the fall of Vietnam and Cambodia to the Communists.

Kissinger thought about returning the prize but apparently decided otherwise, according to an authoritative source.

Kissinger negotiated the peace accords in Paris with Hanoi's Lee Duc Tho in 1973 which permitted the United States to withdraw all of its remaining troops from Vietnam and to secure the release of the American prisoners of war.

He became an American hero in negotiating the peace agreement and he believed that a "decent interval" would prevail which would give the Saigon government a chance to prove that it could stand on its own feet militarily and economically.

That did not happen. Instead the test came much sooner than Kissinger expected and the collapse of American-backed governments in Vietnam and Cambodia was viewed as a humiliating defeat for the policies of Kissinger and former President Richard M. Nixon.

Under those circumstances, he did contemplate returning the award which was given jointly to him and to Lee Duc Tho, who refused to accept the prize.

Kissinger tells the story on himself that once Lee Duc Tho came to him at the start of a negotiating session in Paris and said: "Dr. Kissinger, I want to tell you candidly and frankly, you are a liar."

Former White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler has a new mod wavy hair cut and has grown a mustache.

Ziegler still is working with former President Richard M. Nixon at San Clemente, Calif., but is not on the government payroll. He was expected to give up that job by the end of the month and has hinted to friends that he has a new position. But he has not disclosed what that job is.

Nixon discouraged Ziegler from going on the lecture circuit. The former president told Ziegler, who he used to treat like a son, that he was not equipped to handle a lecture series.

"Maybe later on," Nixon told Ziegler.

Ziegler had planned to go on the college lecture circuit and had a number of speeches set up before he called the whole thing off after student resistance surfaced.

His wife Nancy and two young daughters have been living in nearby Alexandria, Va., but they will be moving to California for the summer.

Nixon's former military aide, Marine Lt. Col. Jack Brennan, is quitting the Marine Corps on August 1. Brennan had 15 years in the service and had planned to make it a career.

He has been serving at Camp Pendleton near the Nixon compound in California and has been putting in his own time after work to help out the former President.

He always had a close relationship with Nixon and Nixon asked that he be specially assigned to him when he left the presidency.

White House aides say that President Ford flatly refused to go along with building a swimming pool on the South Lawn of the White House when they kept giving him estimates of $200,000. But they added he began to perk up when he was presented a figure of $52,417, to be gotten from private donations and covering everything but the cost of landscaping to hide the President when he is swimming.

The project was not open for bids as most government construction is. Ford's aides also said that the public had an interest in the President's health as well as his security and would not object.

Now that he has given the green light they believe that it is "appropriate." The announcement of the project came at a time when the United States was involved in a military confrontation in Cambodia. Aides said that Ford made the final decision to go ahead about a week ago. They saw no problem in the fact that they announced the project the day that the construction workers began digging the pool.

Offer Ends May 24th

Be sure to vote tomorrow . . . . .

My fellow Republicans, the time is now when you will go to the polls to select those two candidates for County Commissioner who will represent your party in November's general election. If we choose wisely NOW . . . . if we urge our friends and relatives to join us NOW in making the right choice I'm certain there is no reason why your candidates will not be elected this fall.

It's apparent to all of us that the job of managing Monroe County is far more complex and involved today than it was a few years ago. It is very big business involving over four million dollars a year as well as the lives and well being of thousands of people — our poor, our elderly, our children and ultimately each and every one of us as taxpayers. The decisions which face our County Commissioners, the analysis of complex information requires a background of experience and knowledge of the kind which I have demonstrated in successful business leadership as well as acquiring the understanding of our social needs in the many citizen activities in which I have participated.

As a newcomer to politics I clearly have not become obligated to any person or group, and my decisions can reflect my independence. I realize that this also means that I need the vote of those of you who might not ordinarily bother to vote in the Primary. If you believe that NOW IS THE TIME FOR A CHANGE read the ballot carefully, across to the end of the line, and pull the lever over my name.

Yours for good government,

Bicentennial in the Big Apple

New York City going folksy

NEW YORK (UPI) — New Yorkers, long accustomed to Broadway ballyhoo and over-the-top celebrations, will observe the nation's 200th birthday with modest community celebrations drawing heavily on the city's immense cultural resources.

The city's celebration officially begins May 22—the 200th anniversary of the convening of the Provincial Congress—with more than 70 events, called a Bicentennial Sampler, crammed into the following 10 days.

These include an official ceremony at City Hall, concerts, exhibitions, parades and stage shows, and "A Salute to American Music" by the American Symphony Orchestra with a spectacular light show and fireworks on the Sheep Meadow of Central Park.

The real action of the Bicentennial celebration will be in the city's communities and neighborhoods. The folksy flavor of most events will be epitomized by a June 15 street fair on Manhattan's 52nd Street from Broadway to Lexington Avenue featuring antiques, Americana, ethnic food, bands and games.

Throughout the city there are scheduled quilting bees, local history projects, walking tours, street and block parties, a bread-baking festival, "instant museums" and a variety of other projects emphasizing that the Big Apple is really a conglomeration of communities. School children participated in a Master Poster contest to depict what aspects of the city they think are "the most."

"I think the Bicentennial will give people a chance to reflect on what we really stand for in this city," said J. Clarence Davies, chairman of the New York City Bicentennial Corp.

It is estimated that the city's cultural institutions, patriotic societies and other organizations have pledged more than $14 million to Bicentennial projects, including the $11 million the Metropolitan Museum is spending on its new American Wing, due to open in 1977. But there is little money officially budgeted for the city's celebration.

Davies heads a small (total staff, about 22), underfunded (total city contribution: $500,000 a year), but highly enthusiastic operation working out of a warren of offices on Lexington Ave.

"The emphasis will be on the citizens of New York City," Davies, a crew-cut real estate broker, said. "What we have here we want to heighten."

"Philadelphia and Boston have used the Bicentennial as an opportunity to attract tourists. I don't think the city needs to do that."

What the city can do is draw on the rich cultural heritage and ethnic background of its neighborhoods, and its position as the arts capital of the Western Hemisphere.

As an example, Davies pointed out that opening week festivities include a dozen or so major symphonic concerts, several ballet exhibitions, poetry readings and major art exhibitions by some of the most renowned museums in the world. The New York Cultural Center has mounted a show titled "Three Centuries of the American Nude," the New York Historical Society is presenting "The Sword of Rebellion is Drawn," and the Whitney Museum is opening a show called "The Whitney Studio Club and American Art."

"And this barely touches what New York City does every day," said Dr. Ronald L. Gaudreau, the corporation's executive vice president.

"I think," Davies added, "that if the Bicentennial produces anything, it should be a raising of consciousness about our national identity, where we were, where we are, where we are going."

The May 22 observance will begin with a parade from the Battery to City Hall with a stop at historic St. Paul's chapel where Mayor Abraham D. Beame will lay a wreath in memory of all who have given their lives in defense of freedom.

At City Hall there will be a

Bourbon, Scotch: Make way for California brandy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — California's brandy industry is trying to make a name for itself—a name protected by federal and state alcoholic beverage control officials.

California brandy makers, who produce more 98 per cent of all U.S. brandy, are working in Sacramento and Washington to have the words "California Brandy" become a "controlled appellation" joining the ranks of Kentucky Bourbon and scotch whiskey.

If the brandy industry is successful, then all brandy labeled "California brandy" must be made from California grapes, distilled in California, aged in California cellars, and bottled in California. Those restrictions would be enforced by the state and federal government.

The industry wants to protect its hold on the fledgling U.S. market it hopes will grow along with the nation's new interest in wines. In 1973, the nation consumed about 5.9 million cases of brandy, and brandy officials estimate sales will total 6.7 million cases this year, with Wisconsin—and the city of Milwaukee in particular—leading the nation in brandy consumption.

"Once wine took firm hold in this country, it was just a matter of time before brandy began to move," said James R. McManus, president of the

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Some confusion in day's early hours can be cleared up if you'll just bide your time. Trying to crash your way through it will only worsen matters.
TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Some new opportunities. Strike while the iron is hot. Don't let your occasional tendency to underestimate your abilities stand in your way.
GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Your day to get ahead. An associate of importance will be surprisingly helpful if asked for advice. Romance and outdoor interests also favored.
CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Fine lunar influences! You should have a happy go of things generally. Especially favored: business and monetary interests; situations calling for clever strategy.
LEO (July 24 to August 23) — You can put distinguished finishing touches on an important project now. And those who were previously "on the fence" will come over to your side.
VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Excellent Mercury influences! Inspiration at a peak. A unique idea you have can be carried out with just the right touch of ingenuity to make it work.
LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Certain situations in your work area now further your interests. An excellent day for handling matters of a confidential nature.
SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — If you have left nothing to chance, you should now be able to launch the first stages of a new venture, meanwhile giving thought to your next moves.
SAGITTARIUS (November 24 to December 21) — Stellar influences excellent for constructive action. If judicious plans have already been made, carry them out smartly; make some, if you note a stalemate to progress.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — A good day for handling details ably, getting past opposition deftly and overcoming inhibitions which prevent smart thinking and action.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — Some things which seemed at a standstill can now be picked up, brightened, advanced. Avoid extremes in thoughts and actions, however.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Branch out to some extent. Realize your limitations, however, so you won't overreach your mark. Some complexities, otherwise.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a fine mind; are logical and keenly analytical in your thinking. Because Taurus rules the throat, many noted singers have been born in this sector of the zodiac, and it would pay you to cultivate your voice. You would also make an excellent composer or a director in the operatic field. Writing appeals to you, but whatever you write would be in a serious or philosophical vein — despite your delightful sense of humor.

Opening lead — six of spades.
This deal was played in the 1930's, which may account for some of the peculiar bids that led to six clubs doubled.
Declarer was Waldemar von Zedtwitz, New York star whose name has been closely associated with virtually every facet of contract bridge from the time the game was invented in 1926 to this very day.
West led a spade, taken with the king, and East returned the jack of hearts. Von Zedtwitz finessed the queen and played the three of clubs. When West played the deuce, declarer played the four from dummy! The finesse succeeded, as seemed likely from the bidding, and from this point forward declarer had smooth sailing. He cashed the ace of hearts, led a diamond to dummy, ruffed a heart with the queen, led the seven of clubs and finessed the nine, ruffed dummy's last heart with the ace, and trumped a spade in dummy.

The K-J of clubs drew West's remaining trumps, and the A-K of diamonds won the last two tricks. Six clubs bid and made for 1,090 points!
Declarer could not have made the slam without taking the deep trump finesse at trick three. Finessing the four of clubs was by no means just a fancy play — it was an absolute essential.
West could have thrown a spanner into the works by playing the six of clubs at trick three instead of the deuce, but this does not diminish the luster of von Zedtwitz's play once he got the chance to finesse the four. Taking advantage of defensive lapses is an important part of the game.

Sherlock Holmes lives again in Atlanta stage thriller

ATLANTA (UPI) — Master sleuth Sherlock Holmes and arch-criminal Prof. Moriarty didn't really perish on that mountain. They re-appeared alive and well and living in Atlanta in the Alliance Theater Company's world premiere of "Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Sign of the Four" or "The Mark of the Timber Tree."

Written and directed by Dennis Rosa, this new script is scheduled for production next season by the Cleveland Playhouse and the Trinity Square Repertory Theater in Rhode Island. Rosa first had experience with Holmes-o-mania in 1972 when he directed an adaptation of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" at the Loretto-Hilton Repertory Company in St. Louis. He repeated that later in the year at the Cleveland Playhouse and again in 1974 at the Trinity Square Theater. That play is now on Broadway. Rosa's current Holmes play as presented in Atlanta is well written and acted by a balanced cast. Atlanta actor Phil Pleasants was cast as Holmes.

Audiences can delight in matching their deductive logic against the unorthodox criminology of literature's best known detective. Holmes and a love-struck Dr. Watson are, as usual, hampered by the comic bumbling of Scotland Yard's disarranged Inspector Lestrade.

An intricate plot is complicated by a damsel in distress, her half-million in treasure, a cannibal, and a peg-legged ruffian. The story climaxes in a wild man-hunt down the Thames offering a tricky bit of stagecraft.

Atlanta audiences loved it. A group from the city's society of Sherlock admirers, the Confederates of the Wistaria Lodge, attended an early performance, donning their deerstalker caps, Inverness capes, and carrying magnifying glasses.

Alliance Theater, a member of the Atlanta Arts Alliance, presents an 18-week season of six plays. David Bishop, producing director of the Alliance theater, believes it is the responsibility of regional theater to produce new plays and the company has given the world premieres of several works.

The company makes its home in the Atlanta Memorial Arts Center along with four other Alliance members — the High Museum, Atlanta Symphony, Atlanta College of Art, and Atlanta Children's Theater. The center offers unusual opportunities for sharing facilities and talents.

Alliance theater has for five years produced a student audience program and a studio company, an apprentice program for young actors. The Studio features one-act plays, which are free to the public, in its own 200-seat theater, and it tours more than 60 Georgia high schools. Alliance Theater also holds workshops for Georgia teachers and students.

Aged actors in Britain keep busy into their 70s. UPI critic Gregory Jensen reports from London:

Visitors to London theaters this summer might be forgiven for thinking they had wandered into a geriatric ward.

Stage after stage creaks to the sprightly tread of stars in their 70s. There are others — actresses as well as actors — with their names in lights well beyond retirement age, or just short of it.

They also give some of the best performances in town.

One is turned in by the latest septuagenarian to take his bows, Alastair Sim.

With his famous walrus jowls contorted in despair or glee, Sim simulates his palsied limbs as if he's as old as the play, "The Clandestine Marriage." It's 209 years old. Sim is only 74, and his portrayal of an antique lecher is funnier than many a younger actor could deliver.

The National Theater's latest production is a mint-new play, Harold Pinter's "No Man's Land." Its stars were veterans when Pinter was born — Sir Ralph Richardson, 72, and Sir John Gielgud, 71. On his nights off from that play, Richardson roars up on his motorcycle for the title role in the National's "John Gabriel Borkman" by Ibsen. His co-stars there are Dame Peggy Ashcroft, 67, and Wendy Hiller, who is a mere 63.

No matter what kind of play you chose in London these days —thriller, musical, high drama or comedy — you'll find a star lightly wearing the weight of years.

For her curtain call in Stephen Sondheim's brilliant musical, "A Little Night Music," co-star Hermione Gingold capers through a spry little dance. She spends the evening in a wheel chair and the dance is her way of saying she does it from duty, not necessity. Such necessity could be forgiven, however. Miss Gingold is 77.

In the London revival of "Harvey," a role Hollywood star James Stewart first played in 1947, Stewart takes the stage with white hair and a few extra lines in his famous face. But by the standards of those around him he's a spring chicken — 64 this month.

That makes him a year younger than Sir John Gielgud, who turned 65 last month while starring in the courtroom drama, "The Case in Question." Dame Anna Neagle is happily playing "The Dame of Sark" at 69. Sir Alec Guinness is starring in "A Family and a Fortune" at a youthful 61. Outside London, Dame Flora Robson is appearing at 73 as Lady Bracknell in "The Importance of Being Earnest."

Lady Bracknell is most often identified with Dame Edith Evans, who gave a one-man show last year at 86. That almost ties the record set by Dame Sybil Thorndike who reluctantly retired from the stage at 87 but is still active in theatrical affairs at 92.

An innovative children's theater has opened in New York. UPI Senior Editor Frederick M. Winship reports:

Adults are admitted to Budd Friedman's theater only if accompanied by a bona fide child.

That's because Friedman's "Improvisation Jr." at the Improvisation Cafe is strictly cabaret for children under 16. The only non-child involved in the entertainment is comedian Andy Kaufman, a specialist in pre-adolescent comedy, who encoaxes and acts as accompanist.

The Improvisation Cafe was established 12 years ago to give young performers a chance to try out and veterans an opportunity to polish new material in relatively undemanding, informal surroundings.

Legally oriented stripper prefers peeling to law

BOSTON (UPI) — It's difficult to believe, but there is a side of the incredible Ms. Jaquie Brodie that cannot be seen.

For when the 5-foot-2 stripper struts the long runway at the World Famous 2 O'Clock Club in Boston's tawdry Combat Zone, she bares all the charms she claims will make her America's next sex goddess.

The drinking stops. There's no talking. All eyes watch the tiny dancer rip through her bouncy, (er, what's a good word?) open performance. (The answer is 37-22-35)

"I think my mother wishes I was a lawyer instead," she said, dressed in a demure off-white pantsuit and picking at a dish of Crepes Aurore during an interview in a fashionable restaurant.

That combination sets her apart from most other strip and porno movie stars. She answers questions with a staccato of multisyllabic words. Beneath the flaming red hair is a brain that has soaked up political science and law studies.

"I had very idealistic political views and a deeper feeling that I was about to be trapped within the system," she explained on how she became an exotic dancer instead of an attorney.

"I was discouraged by Watergate and felt, like the Roman Empire, America was crumbling from within." So a few hours of study away from a law degree, she traded the hushed quiet of a court for the rowdy nightlife of a fledgling sex queen.

Jaquie (really Jaqueline Marsha Rosenbloom) began life with a "classic backstage mother... I had all the lessons and a lot of children's parts while I was growing up. I was pushed into the academic route so my mother could feel I was secure in a profession."

She never gave up the idea of going on stage after having the lead in her high school play. "Ultimately, it was my disenchantment with law school and politics and my love of the stage" which led to stripping and being an X-rated actress. "And I'm much happier than in the academic world."

"I'm a realist. I found too much distance between formulating theories and reality."

She adds that being a top-billed stripper earns her "three or four times" as much money as a lawyer with the same number of years experience. She's starring in the pornographic movie "Sodom and Gomorrah" which hasn't been released yet and plans another large budget porno film based on her life story, entitled "The Incredible Ms. Jaquie Brodie."

"Fans of erotic art don't want it to be treated as lousy, sleazy and cheap," she said. "I'd like the more civilized approach, like the classic Greek views. The body is beautiful."

She claims her "timing is perfect" to let her become "a modern Marilyn Monroe. Linda Lovelace didn't do it. Marilyn Chambers didn't. Fannie Foxe didn't. In all of show business, we don't have a sex symbol. Raquel Welch has a very attractive body, but has not captured the imagination of the American fantasy. America is thirsting for a sex symbol."

When she stalks onto the stage she leaves thoughts of texts behind except perhaps for habeas corpus, the medieval Latin legal term meaning "you shall have the body."

Nobody beats Chevy's prices on trucks like these.*

CHEVY STEPSIDE Nobody beats our price on a full-size 6-cylinder pickup.

We're talking about our C10 model with the 250 Six and a 6 1/2-foot cargo box, with a GVW rating under 6,001 lbs. The engine offers smooth overall performance using unleaded fuel. The truck can go farther now between tune-ups and other scheduled maintenance. And still offers many of the same Chevy value features as our famous Fleet-side.

CHEVY FLEETSIDE Nobody beats our price on a full-size V8 pickup.

And that includes a 350 V8 and a cargo box in the popular 8-foot size. Fleetside also sets high standards with features like Massive Girder Beam independent front suspension with coil springs, High Energy Ignition system and tough, double-wall construction in front fenders, hood, cab, Fleetside body panels and tailgate. Front disc/rear finned drum brakes are computer-matched to gross vehicle weight. Available heavy-duty chassis equipment provides a 6,200-lb. GVWR for C10 Chevy pickups.

DON'T MAKE ANY TRUCK DEAL TILL YOU SEE YOUR CHEVY DEALER

CHEVY VAN Nobody beats our price on a delivery van.

Forward-mounted engine leaves nearly 10 feet of unobstructed load space, even in this G10 model on the compact 110" wheelbase. Yet Chevy Van has a tight turning circle for maneuverability. And a wide-opening front hood for 27 fast and easy service checks. Our 250 Six is standard on 6-cylinder G10 models; a 350 2-bbl. V8 is standard on G10 V8 models.

EL CAMINO Nobody beats our price on a luxury pickup.

It's a car when you need a car, a truck when you need a truck. El Camino puts it all together: good looks, good ride, responsiveness, and a 6-ft. pickup box with air-adjustable shock absorbers. This one has our available 250 Six; V8 power also is available.

SUBURBAN Nobody beats our price on a six-passenger Superwagon.

This Chevy Suburban, a C10 model with a 350 V8, carries six people comfortably. Other versions seat nine passengers or, equipped for towing, move up to 14,500 lbs. including weight of trailer, people, luggage and Suburban. Because under that wagon style and wagon smoothness is a tough truck chassis.

VEGA PANEL EXPRESS Nobody beats our price on a closed delivery truck.

It's easy to maneuver and park and very frugal with unleaded gasoline. It delivered 21 mpg in the city test and 31 mpg in the highway test according to the EPA Buyer's Guide (credit light weight and our standard 140-cu.-in. aluminum four-cylinder engine). Raise the liftgate, though, and you see a flat load bed with 68 cu. ft. for cargo. Now that's a big little truck.

Play the Want Ad Game

Here are the simple rules for playing the Want Ad game. Remove the page from the paper and place on card table or paste on cardboard. All the equipment needed is one die from a set of dice, plus colored buttons to use as markers. Two or more may play.

Taking turns, players place button on Start and roll the dice. When a player's marker lands on a numbered box, he follows the directions written next to corresponding number. The first player to reach or pass YOU WIN $, wins the game.

It's fun and easy, almost as easy as placing a Want Ad. You'll like the way Want Ads can dispose of your no-longer-used items taking up space around the house or garage. And you will find no greater bargains than the goods and services advertised in the Classified Section.

Whether for fun or for real, the name of the winning game is Want Ads.
